Wave of Violence Sweeps U.S. as Protests Grow

By DON VIPOND

The board of management of New Westminster's Royal Columbian Hospital holds its regular meeting tonight with a startling additional item on the agenda.

It's Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's statement on a radio hot line show Tuesday night that he is considering recommending to the cabinet that the government take over administration of Royal Columbian because of "mismanagement" by the administration.

If the government did appoint a public administrator, it would be an unprecedented move made possible by legislation passed at the last session.

J. W. S. Biggs, the hospital board's chairman, told the Times from Vancouver today he didn't see how health care for the area could be assisted by a government takeover of administration.

He said the board would consider certain requests from Loffmark at its meeting tonight and make a statement on the situation Thursday.

'SINGLED OUT'

"Apparently Mr. Loffmark feels we are to be singled out as the glaring example of mismanagement," Biggs said.

The health minister said Tuesday night that administrative costs at Royal Columbian are out of line with those at Vancouver General Hospital. He added he had no quarrel with a recent wage settlement for staff members or medical employees.

Hospitals in B.C. are run by boards which have provincial government and municipal representation. There are 14 members on the board of the 445-bed Royal Columbian. The hospital was founded in 1862.

NOT FIRST TIME

It's not the first time the hospital and health minister have clashed.

Last June 63 doctors using the hospital took a day off to picket the Legislature and press Loffmark on expansion plans for the hospital.

The doctors argued they were working under 19th century conditions and the hospital was "one of the worst in Canada."

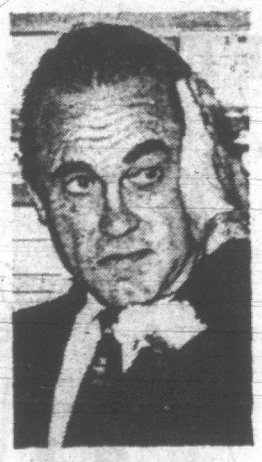
RENOVATIONS

Subsequently a major renovation program was approved which will cost about $10 million and see the hospital's 1912 wing replaced, a wing built in 1950 updated and more beds and services added.

A month ago Loffmark culminated a series of warnings on soaring hospital operating costs by announcing that the British Columbia Insurance Service, the agency overseeing hospital function, would provide the money for only 70 per cent of salary increases granted hospital staffs this year.

Court Action Sought To Keep Logs Moving

Forest giant MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. plans a B.C. Supreme Court action Thursday morning to keep its mill and logging divisions operating in the face of a coastal towboat strike and refusal of its employees to handle "hot" cargoes.



RUNOFF for the governorship of Alabama was assured today when neither former governor George Wallace (above) nor Governor Albert Brewer received more than 50 per cent of the vote in the Democratic primary. At noon, with 85 per cent of the vote counted, Wallace has 353,424 against 370,323 for Brewer. See story Page 28.

The company said applications for injunctions would be heard at 10:30 a.m. to require International Woodworkers of America Local 1-80 at Duncan and Canadian Merchant Service Guild officers and members to stop interfering with production at M-B Chemainus sawmill and logging divisions.

If successful, the company said, the injunctions would restore normal operations to M-B units where IWA boatmen have refused to handle logs destined for mills.

SIX CURTAILED

There have been curtailments at six M-B operations. Besides the two at Chemainus, there have been interruptions at Kitimat and Cameron Lake logging divisions and at Somass and Alberni Pacific sawmill divisions.

Court registry officers in Victoria, Duncan and Nanaimo reported they have yet to receive applications for injunctions against unions involved in the three-day-old strike.

Spokesmen for towboat companies and major timber companies said Tuesday they would flood courts with applications for injunctions against members of the International Woodworkers of America and the Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

About 450 men were laid off at the MacMillan Bloedel Chemainus sawmill Monday when IWA boom crews refused to handle logs ordinarily handled by CMSG crews.

At Port Alberni Tuesday crews of 12 "dozer boats" operated by IWA members refused to enter a log storage area, causing shutdown of two large sawmills.

By today an estimated 1,035 men at Island milling and logging operations had been laid off as a result of the Merchant Service Guild strike

BOURASSA SEEKS HELP FROM OTTAWA

The creation of 100,000 more jobs in the province of Quebec will not be too difficult, premier-elect Robert Bourassa tells Peter C. Newman in the second of a two-part series on Quebec's future which appears on Page 3.

"Normal expansion of the economy will provide 60,000 jobs and a stable government will also attract plenty of outside capital."

Bourassa is also seeking help from Ottawa in accelerating start of construction of a billion-dollar jumbo airport and an increase in grants for low-cost housing.

CLEAN N-PLANT

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Westinghouse Electric Corp. said today it has developed a nuclear power plant design that eliminates any discharge of radioactivity to the environment under normal operating conditions.

If on'y they c'd prove thet kilowatts cause cancer or somethin' we might git control o' power lines.

Reds Launch Viet Offensive

Viet Troops May Stay

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—South Vietnamese troops may be in Cambodia to stay, according to a Pentagon source here.

When the Americans come out at the end of June—President Nixon's deadline—the Vietnamese forces will remain indefinitely in the Parrot's Beak area.

The source said American troops may leave Cambodia well ahead of the deadline date, possibly by the end of May, if the search and destroy operations are concluded.

RAINING

Weather conditions could be a factor controlling the American troop withdrawal. Unexpected scattered rains have already started to fall, preceding the onset of the normal Southeast Monsoon season due later this month.

Sources reported that plans now under consideration call for new forays against Communist sanctuaries in Cambodia as well as the use of small numbers of Thai troops in Northern Cambodia and Southern Laos.

Of the first three allied attacks into Cambodia—three new spearheads developed Tuesday night—the Se San River operation—involving the two-brigade 4th U.S. Division and the 22nd ARVN (Army of the Republic of Vietnam)

CIVIL UNREST HITS SAIGON

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government moved four battalions of troops into Saigon today as a precaution against growing civil unrest in the capital.

Earlier, soldiers burst into the national pagoda in Saigon and opened fire on about 600 monks, nuns and students occupying the building, a South Vietnamese spokesman said. Ten were reported killed in the incident.

40 Americans Killed In Major Actions

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. and South Vietnamese forces opened three new fronts inside Cambodia today, but in Vietnam the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese launched attacks that killed 40 Americans and wounded 84, the U.S. command reported.

One North Vietnamese attack, on an artillery base south of the demilitarized zone, killed 29 Americans, the largest American toll in a single action in 20 months.

Thirty more Americans from the 101st Airborne Division were reported wounded in the attack on the artillery base 16 miles south of the DMZ. Initial reports said 15 North Vietnamese were killed.

While a heavy mortar barrage pinned down the U.S. troops, the North Vietnamese hit the base firing rocket grenades and rifles.

Sharp fighting and terror attacks were reported at several other points in the northern provinces, with six more Americans and 15 guerrillas killed. A grenade thrown into a police station in Da Nang killed six Vietnamese policemen and wounded six.

CONCENTRATE ON NORTH

The North Vietnamese appeared to be putting most of their retaliatory effort into the northern provinces. U.S. officials claim the operations in Cambodia have disrupted Communist supply lines to the south of South Vietnam.

Thousands more American and South Vietnamese troops crossed into Cambodia in the biggest offensive of the war.

Informed sources said between 20,000 and 25,000 American troops and about an equal number of South Vietnamese now are hunting North Vietnamese and Viet Cong base camps in Cambodia at six points along 250 miles of the border.

The Southern allied commands claimed more than 2,500 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed, most of them by air strikes, since the first offensive was launched Thursday. Thousands of tons of arms, ammunition, other military equipment and food have been captured or destroyed, headquarters said.

But they still have not located the Communist headquarters reported to be in Cambodia.

Incomplete reports put Southern allied casualities at 17 Americans and 170 South Vietnamese troops killed and 61 U.S. and 651 South Vietnamese troops wounded.

NATIONAL GUARD 'TRIGGER-HAPPY'

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Senator Stephen Young (Dem.-Ohio) said today the fatal shooting of four students at Kent State University Monday was touched off when an Ohio national guardsman accidentally fired his rifle after being struck by a tear-gas canister.

Other national guardsmen opened fire on students, he added.

"There was no sniper," the senator said after receiving reports on the incident from two staff members in Kent, Ohio.

Young said that during the confrontation a student apparently hurled back at the advancing guardsmen a canister still partly filled with tear gas, which had been lobbed at the students by the troops.

He said the canister struck a guardsmen on the shoulder or upper arm "and his gun fired accidentally."

Other guardsmen "then fired instantly," Young said.

He said that, based on reports from two of his aides who went to the scene, he is convinced no order was given to troops to open fire.

They were "just trigger-happy national guardsmen."

Nixon Orders Ohio Probe

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Nixon has ordered a full-scale investigation by the justice department into the fatal shooting of four Kent State University students by Ohio national guardsmen Monday.

Nixon's call for a complete probe was disclosed by the White House after he met today with six young male students from Kent State.

Rail Crossing Smash Kills Eight in Spokane

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A mother and seven of her children died today in the collision of their station wagon and a freight train as she drove the children to school.

An eighth child survived the shattering impact of the Burlington Northern freight train with the automobile at a grade crossing in the Spokane Valley just east of here.

Killed were Katherine Lorraine Krank, 36, and her children Rhonda, 17, Audrey, 16, Kenneth, 14, Dana, 13, David, 11, and twin girls, Anita and Barbara, 6.

The injured girl, reported in serious condition in hospital, was identified as Carla, 8.

Police said the car was northbound and the 53-car freight was westbound, when the engine of the train struck the loaded station wagon.

A track supervisor for Burlington Northern who witnessed the collision said the car never hesitated before pulling onto the tracks in front of the train.

There was a crossbar marking the grade crossing but no blinking light.

Chinese Seek Long Conflict

By STANLEY KARNOW
(Analysis)

HONG KONG (WP) — Peking's decision Tuesday to break relations with the Phnom Penh regime and recognize Prince Norodom Sihanouks government-in exile — nearly two months after his ouster — suggests that the Chinese welcome a worsening situation in the Indochina region.

Over the long term, the Chinese use of Sihanouk is consistent with their efforts to promote a divided Indochina in order to prevent the Vietnamese Communists from becoming dominant in the area.

For the dream of China's rulers over the centuries has been a Southeast Asia that is compliant with their wishes if not actually under their hegemony.

As far back as 1954, at the Geneva Conference that ended the French war in Indochina, Chinese premier Chou En-Lai defended Sihanouk against North Vietnamese demands that their own proteges be included in the Cambodian delegation.

ASSURANCES

On several occasions since then, Sihanouk has claimed to have had assurances from the Chinese that they would protect Cambodia against Hanoi.

While the Chinese cannot really think that the prince will return triumphantly to Phnom Penh at the head of his "liberation army," their stress on his legitimacy as Cambodia's chief of state nevertheless gives them a weapon with which to curb Hanoi's ambitions in Indochina.

EXHORTATIONS

At the same time, their exhortations to the Indochinese to continue struggling mirrors their hope that both the Vietnamese Communists and the United States will be bogged down and gradually weakened by a long, inconclusive conflict.

As long as it does not threaten them, therefore, the Chinese favor a protracted Indochina war that is, in effect, their way of fighting the United States by proxy.

Division—is seen here as the most difficult.

Army sources said that Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, had stretched his available forces fairly thin in the central highlands to make troops available for the Se San River operation.

So far, enemy reaction has been limited. Last week in nearby Southeast Laos, prior to the allied thrusts, North Vietnamese troops seized the long-ignored government town and airstrip of Attopeu in what was seen here as an effort to shield the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

Ex-MP Cleared

LONDON (AP) — A former member of Parliament was cleared today of eight charges of passing secret information to Communist agents.

Frail, white-haired Will Owen, 69, had pleaded not guilty.

against the B.C. Towboat Owners' Association.

As of today mills affected included Butler Bros. Logging at Sooke (85 men), Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber Co. at Jordan River (80), Rayonier Canada (B.C.) Ltd. at Jordan River (90), Sooke Forest Products Ltd. Goodridge mill at Sooke (250), B.C. Forest Products Ltd. Point Ellice and Victoria sawmill divisions cut graveyard shifts, Malloch and Mosely Logging at Alta Lake (50), with about 30 more expected at Muir Creek by the weekend, and MacMillan Bloedel logging at China Creek, Alberni Inlet (35).

At Port Alberni Tuesday two of the province's biggest sawmills, MacMillan Bloedel's Somass and Alberni-Pacific plants, some 1,200 men were laid off as members of the CMSG sealed off stockpiled booms of logs with a floating picket line.

A further 100 men were expected to be laid off at the Sooke Forest Products mill at Sooke by Friday, along with about 500 men at B.C. Forest Producys two Victoria sawmills unless agreement is reached with the merchant service guild to allow logs from harbor booming grounds to be towed to the mills.

BCFP's Victoria plywood mill, served independently, has enough log stock to run about six weeks.

The same applies to MacMillan Bloedel's Alberni plywood mill and its Alberni pulp mill.

DAY-TO-DAY BASIS

Rayonier has five logging camps other than the one at Jordan River, which will operate on day-to-day basis. The 700 men employed in them face lay-off unless logs can be delivered.

Malloch and Mosely, which has contracts to log for Pacific Logging Co. Ltd., said the 15-man camp operated at Nitinat Lake faces uncertain future, although it can stock logs for a time on the lake. It depends on tugs to carry booms through tidal narrows to the west coast.

B.C. Forest also has a camp at Port Renfrew, where 240 men are employed. They could be laid off within two weeks.

Victoria Plywood mill was expected to continue operating for about 30 days and Plumper Bay Sawmills Ltd. will be able to keep running about two weeks.

A towboat owners' spokesman said a policy of trying to man tugs with management personnel for "essential services" is being done on a limited basis because the owners are not resigning themselves to inaction.

But they have now begun to encounter "hot cargoes" which he indicated would hamper this policy.

The owners are not attempting to provide anything like normal operations, the BCTOA spokesman said.

Snuol as American bombers wiped out 90 per cent of it and a U.S. tank force rolled in unopposed. The bombers were called in after the tank column fought its way into the centre of the town Tuesday and then had to retreat.

The three fronts opened today were northeast and southwest of the Fish Hook:

1. Three thousand U.S. infantrymen of the 25th Division began moving by helicopter and armored personnel carriers westward along Route 20, 50 miles southwest of the Fish Hook.

2. South Vietnamese troops moved north out of Loc Nihn and were to link up with the U.S. 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment advancing northeast on Route 7 after capturing Snuol.

3. Helicopters landed troops of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Divison and South Vietnamese troops 23 miles north of Song Be and about 10 miles beyond the border. This is also northeast of the Fish Hook.

RESISTANCE LIGHT

First reports indicated light to moderate contact in new operations.

There was no information on the northernmost Cambodian front, west of South Vietnam's central highlands, where heavy ground fire and bad weather stalled an attempt to land two battalions by helicopter 50 miles west of Pleiku Tuesday. Only one battalion of 50 men got in Tuesday.

The sixth front is in the Parrot's Beak section of Cambodia, due west of Saigon, the southernmost front. No major action was reported.

In Phnom Penh, Reuters correspondent Ian MacKenzie reported that a Viet Cong force was locked in battle with two battalions of Cambodian troops on the west bank of the Mekong River, 25 miles southeast of the capital.

The battle was near the strategic Neak Leung ferry crossing. The east bank of the crossing was captured by guerrillas Sunday.

In Saigon, the South Vietnamese government closed all schools, advanced the nightly curfew two hours to 11 p.m. and set up police checkpoints around the city to cope with persistent unrest. The capital has had almost daily demonstrations for two months.

The Supreme Court gave President Nguyen Van Thieu a setback Tuesday night by ruling that the military court trial of National Assembly member Tran Ngoc Chau was unconstitutional. Chau was sentenced to 10 years in prison for having contacts with a North Vietnamese agent, his brother. Chau contended that Thieu framed him because of his opposition to Thieu's policies.

Protests Growing

(Times News Services)

Demonstrations on campuses across the United States continued today in protest of the extension of combat into Cambodia and the slaying of four Kent State University students Monday by National Guardsmen.

Student strikes have spread to more than 170 campuses and there are plans to extend them to more, with faculty and administrative backing in many cases.

Boycott Paris Talks

PARIS (AP)—The Communist side boycotted the Vietnam peace talks today to protest American air raids on North Vietnam last weekend and U.S. military operations in Cambodia. But the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong did not break up the conference.

The North Vietnamese announced that they were postponing today's 66th meeting of the peace talks until Thursday, May 14. The regular Thursday meeting this week had been scheduled for today because this Thursday is Ascension Day, a holiday in France.

Oil Firm Indicted for Spill

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In the first action of its kind in the United States, a federal grand jury has indicted a major oil company on charges arising from a huge offshore oil spill.

The Chevron Oil Co. was cited Tuesday on 900 counts of willfully violating government regulations aimed at preventing pollution from oil wells drilled at sea.

Conviction on all counts could result in fines totalling $1,800,000.

In Washington, Interior Secretary Walter Hickel said enforcement of federal oil well safety rules is going to be strict. "We will be fair but we will be tough."

The grand jury said Chevron knowingly and wilfully failed to install and maintain storm chokes or similar subsurface control devices on 90 oil wells off the Louisiana coast in the Gulf of Mexico.

"We are confident that when the case is tried, we will be completely vindicated," said K. H. Shaffer of New Orleans, president of Chevron.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

A Pacific cold front will spread cloud and rain over the northern B.C. coast this afternoon but a ridge of high pressure over the south coast and B.C. interior will slow the advance of the disturbance over the province.

The Weather and You

The time when most of us long to get out in the weather, no matter whether it's cold or warm, blustery or rainy, is after we've been inside all day working in warm rooms and feeling lousy with that stuffed-up feeling.

If you feel that way and you go outside for a walk and some deep breathing, it isn't long before you begin to feel better. Your head is cleared, so to speak.

When that has happened to you, probably you were stimulated by the force of the wind against your body as you walked.

Wind acts as a sort of mechanical stimulant. The stronger the wind blows, the greater the stimulus. But when your body is in motion against the wind it doesn't experience the same degree of stimulation all over. You are stimulated more than double in the area from the chest to the top of your head than you are at the level of your knees.

MIRACLE COATING REPLACES PAINT

Another boon to the space age has been accomplished for home and apartment owners — an exterior wall coating so tough and durable it is guaranteed to totally eliminated exterior painting for over 15 years. This remarkable product combines the long-lasting properties of fiber-glass, asbestos, mica and perlite to make a wall surface that resists all climatic extremes. 16 colors available.

Guided missile manufacturers for the United States government have found this material a superior product fo insulation of heat shields used in the space program. Over 2 million world-wide applications have been made on industrial, commercial and residential buildings since 1946.

Applied with a Gun

"Fiberglass" Textured Coating is applied with heavy duty spray equipment under high pressure. It fuses itself to the wall surface to a thickness of 20 times that of paint. It remains flexible and withstands cracking and surface expansion and contraction. Every application is registered and factory-guaranteed for 15 full years against chipping, peeling or flaking.

Free information on how easily you may have "Fiberglass" Textured Coating applied now at low bank terms, with no down payment, may be obtained by calling direct or collect to Textured Coating Division:

New Quebec Chief Looks to Ottawa In Economic Push

By PETER C. NEWMAN
Special to the Times

QUEBEC CITY — It's a wrenching experience after an interview with Robert Bourassa, Quebec's young premier-elect, to imagine him in the province's top political job — a job that has so often been held by men who behaved as if they were kings, negotiating abroad with sovereign pretentions, moving through the province in flag-fluttering limousines, and dispensing largess with an up-raised hand.

Bourassa could not be more different from the florid personalities of the past. His style is almost wholly cerebral. He is laconic, unimpressed with himself and unemotional. There is about him still the air of the brilliant, bespectacled student who figures he can solve any problem with the application of enough energy and intelligence.

The most pressing of his problems at the moment is highly unacademic. He has to live up to his controversial election pledge of creating 100,000 new jobs a year.

"It's a promise that won't be as difficult to keep as it appears," Bourasssa told me. "About 60,000 new jobs will be created by the normal expansion of the economy so I'll have to find about 40,000 extra jobs. That might be tough if I had won only 55 seats but with my large majority, Quebec will have the kind of stable government which will attract plenty of outside capital."

Must Find 40,000 Jobs

Certainly Bourassa's efforts to revive the Quebec economy begin with renewed investor confidence. In one dramatic morning, on the day after last week's election, an incredible $11 million in cash was re-deposited in the Place Ville Marie branch of the Royal Bank of Canada alone. John Meyer, the Montreal Gazette's financial columnist, has estimated that expansion projects worth at least $200 million, deferred pending the outcome of the election, will now proceed.

Bourassa is counting, too, on help from the Trudeau government — thought he may not get it in view of the federal mania about inflation. This will undoubtedly produce the first clash between the Trudeau and Bourassa governments: between Quebec's urgent need to create more jobs and Ottawa's determination to cut spending, even at the expense of creating more unemployment.

Negotiations have been started to accelerate work on the $1 billion jumbo airport at Ste. Scholastique and Bourassa's government is expected to ask Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to raise its grants for low-cost housing projects in Quebec.

Bourassa himself plans early visits to the Toronto and New York money markets to sell his province's investment potential and says he'll accept any amount of foreign capital from anywhere—including Russia—to make the Quebec economy buoyant again.

Bourassa wants American money most of all but he emphatically does not want American culture. "I guess you could say I am a Canadian nationalist," he told me, "but not on emotional grounds. It's very hard to be emotionally Canadian. What's good about Canada is that it's a protection against the United States. In North America, the smaller the political unit, the more dependent it is on the United States, which is the most conservative and the most powerful country in the world. Canada is a protection for us against being swallowed up by the United States."

In setting his economic priorities, Bourassa may surprise the Quebec businessmen who regard him as their captive. "Economic growth is not in itself sufficient to reduce social inequalities," he insists and already has officials investigating the feasibility of a guaranteed annual income plan. "We must," he says, "find and eliminate all socially unwarranted expenditures, in order to re-orient our efforts toward the rehabilitation of underprivileged citizens on a more equitable and effective basis."

When he is talking about social justice Robert Bourassa sounds suspiciously like Pierre Elliott Trudeau: "The citizen who, in this post-industrial and consumer society, risks becoming enslaved more and more by a system which depersonalizes him, must be able to find in the laws that govern him the guarantees of his personal liberty and his fundamental rights, without which he loses all his dignity."

Like Trudeau, Bourassa pays lip service to "participatory democracy" and worries about the generation gap: "To integrate today's youth into the wider community, a new style of leadership is needed, a new method of government—new leaders that will be attuned to the new cinema, art, literature, the new philosophy of life, the new pattern of social relations that describe the new culture of youth."

In fact, the more you study Bourassa the more you realize that even if he doesn't have the Trudeau temperament, he does have the Trudeau approach. But there is one important difference. Trudeau only listens to technocrats: Bourassa is one.

When Bourassa talks about Quebec not being "a province like the others," he is suggesting not that other provinces don't have special characteristics of their own, but that the sociological and cultural character of Quebec "makes it more different than the others. That's why," he says, "anyone who governs Quebec has special responsibilities — responsibilities to see that the French language and culture survive and flourish in North America."

He intends to give legislative substance to his determination that French must become Quebec's priority working language. He is convinced that the dominance of the English language in the province's commercial and industrial life has been one of the strongest arguments used by separatists in favor of independence.

Bourassa hopes that Rene Levesque takes up the offer from one of his successful Parti Quebecois members to try for a safe seat in the National Assembly. "I like Rene," Bourassa told me. "He is tough and he forced Quebecers to think about the future. I'm personally sure he is not entirely convinced about his theory of separatism. After one radio debate I had with him during the campaign, I heard that he told a friend, I would have liked Bourassa to discuss that with Parizeau (Levesque's chief lieutenant and economic advisor) to see who is right . . ."

Because Robert Bourassa scored his impressive electoral victory without incurring any debts to any particular section of the electorate or indeed his party, which never thought he'd win, he is now in an unusually strong political position and intends to exploit it. "I have a great responsibility to my country and to my province," he said at the end of our interview, "and I'll work 16 hours a day fulfilling it."

'RADIO, FILMS KEY TO UNITY'

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier said Tuesday that Canada is united physically, but the integration and development of the media will make or break the Canadian identity.

And he defended his efforts to make Canadian broadcasting more Canadian.

Pelletier was in Victoria attending a luncheon held in his honor by the Oak Bay Liberal Association. He told his audience that the electronic media — radio, television and films — "will forge the cultural and economic unity of Canada."

"The various elements of this country contribute to its unity," he said, "but a cultural link must be maintained if we are to have mutual harmony and respect."

He praised the contributions of what he called "a new generation of B.C. artists" towards cultural unity and said there are many Quebec artists now taking an interest in the West Coast who would normally have gone to Paris to study and work.

The minister also had kinds words for the increase in film-making in this province, an increase due mainly to contributions from the Canadian Film Development Corp., which falls under his jurisdiction. Several feature films have been made or are in the process of being made here, he said, as was the television series, The Manipulators.

Later, Pelletier insisted that despite the questionable box-office success of feature films made in Canada, the FDC is making people in the international film world aware of the increasing interest in film-making in Canada.

Cornered by a clutch of local radio people, the minister was told that regulations are not the answer to Canadian content on Canadian broadcasting stations. The 30-per-cent Canadian content ruling, they said, is not realistic at the present time.

The minister replied that the sovereignty of the country is also a cultural matter, but that it is not the intention of the Canadian Radio and Television Commission to "shut us within our own borders."

"In Canada," he said, "We've been broadcasting for 50 years. Although I do not know the situation on the West Coast, I know that in the east, broadcasting has come from the cheapest source, which is American."

"It is time to tell people that the majority of this broadcasting should be Canadian."

TAKEOVER SET MAY 12

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier-elect Robert Bourassa said Tuesday Quebec's new Liberal government will be sworn in Tuesday, May 12.

But he told a news conference that he is already making decisions as if he were in the premier's office.

The Liberal leader, whose party won last Wednesday's provincial elections, met for less than an hour with members of the Liberal caucus.

Courtenay to Admit River Pollution

COURTENAY — City council has decided to plead guilty to a charge of polluting the Courtenay River.

The charge was laid by fisheries officer Bill Webber and will be heard Friday in Courtenay provincial court.

Pollution is alleged to have taken place April 29 in water near the city marina. The civic airport landing area had been oiled and during a cloudburst surplus oil ran off into marina water.

The charge carries a minimum fine of $100 and a maximum of $1,000.

City council discussed the affair in committee Monday and when the meeting became public again, announced the decision to plead guilty.

Two aldermen, Harry Harris and Dan Woodrow, opposed the decision.

Mr. Chretien Makes It Clear

AN ADDRESS GIVEN IN PORTland, Oregon, a few days ago by Mr. Jean Chretien, the minister of Indian affairs and northern development, did much to clarify Canada's policy and intentions in the Arctic, and it gave an indirect answer to the question of our claim to sovereignty in the Northwest Passage and the seas of the Far North. "The Arctic Waters Pollution Bill," said Mr. Chretien "is not a claim to sovereignty." It is that bill which sets forth a 100-mile offshore limit within which Canada will impose safeguards to prevent pollution of the sea and shores by shipping. But even if it does not constitute a direct claim it may well exert a decisive effect on our national status in the polar regions.

"This legislation has not been designed against any one country in particular," Mr. Chretien said, and "Canada welcomes innocent international use of the Northwest Passage." But in a new interpretation of "innocent," the minister said the Canadian government would not consider a passage in that category "if it poses a pollution threat to the Arctic environment."

Sketching the great influx of people and equipment into the Arctic, involving thousands of miles of access and truck roads, thousands of oil and gas drillings, and thousands of miles of projected pipelines, Mr. Chretien foresaw the rise of camps and towns to accommodate 10,000 workers. Some of the new jobs, he said, must be filled by the 4,000 Eskimo and Indian heads of households who should have an opportunity to take part in the new era in the Northland.

That new era will not be unalloyed progress and benefit. The transition from the age-old nomadic life of the hunter to a highly developed urban industrial existence will be a difficult one for the native inhabitants. Some have made the change successfully, others have found only poison and degradation in contacts with the whites.

Because of the great pollution dangers that threaten a relatively virgin area of the earth which is peculiarly susceptible to deterioration from industrial invasion, Mr. Chretien revealed that he plans to recommend federal legislation "for the control and use of northern lands," along the lines of the protection afforded by the recent Northern Inland Waters Act. This will be a continuation of the governmental initiative which sparked unilateral protective legislation for the Arctic seas in the absence of any effective international measures.

"International law," said Mr. Chretien, "in its present state is not able to meet these pollution threats." While the rights of shipping to use world sea lanes may have been practical in earlier times, today, he said, "when millions of barrels of oil are afloat in tankers on the high seas in any given day, the threat of pollution is real and the interest of the coastal states . . . must be recognized."

Mr. Chretien gave further background to Canada's anti-pollution initiative. He recalled that at the World Shipping Conference in Brussels last year, "it was obvious that these (shipping) states continued to expect to have absolute priorities for their particular requirements. It became clear to the government of Canada that unilateral action would have to be taken . . ."

In this address, his first in the United States since becoming a cabinet minister, Mr. Chretien obviously was at pains to get Canada's message across to the members of the Pacific Northwest Trade Association. The gist of it was that Canada welcomes United States and other foreign use of the Arctic waters, but on Canada's terms. The success of that plan will result in the establishment of effective Canadian sovereignty without any direct claim that might arouse a confrontation. It will be sovereignty through usage and custom—a more viable and productive state than that resulting from mere enunciation of a claim.

Student Radicals More Numerous

IN THE RECENT ESCALATION of campus strife in the United States it has almost gone unnoticed that the geography of violence has changed. While most of the confrontations began in large urban universities like Columbia or Berkeley, now the riots are taking place at small-town universities in middle-America. It is six years since Mario Savio and the free-speech movement at Berkeley made headlines.

In 1970 there are about 7,300,000 United States students enrolled in degree programs across the country and they are increasingly becoming radicalized. At Kent State University in Ohio no mere handful of radicals fomented the riot that left four students dead. At least 7,000 students were involved out of a campus population of 20,000. In Santa Barbara almost the whole university took part in a riot that culminated in the burning of a bank. In the last year other riots have taken place in Kansas and at the University of Maryland, to name but two. And significantly these schools are in what has been described as the bastion of the silent majority.

Such generalizations can be meaningless, but it is plain that the radical dissenters are no longer a minuscule minority. Their anger is aimed mainly at a nine-year undeclared war that has resulted in the death of 40,000 Americans. Mostly young, they know that under new laws they can be plucked from the campus and deposited in Vietnam within a few months. Such feelings of uncertainty and insecurity often result in rage at a system that seems unresponsive to their voices.

While Canadians deplore senseless violence in the United States the young people of this country are not faced with what to many Americans is a moral decision. Communication has become impossible between students and the population at large. But as long as students burn and destroy there will be no peace. Conversely, shooting of students will only lead to more violent bitterness. Sympathizing with our United States neighbors is not enough; Canadians of all age groups should draw a lesson from the United States' tragic experience.

Hazards of a Dry Spring

IN ITS FIRST REPORT OF THE fire season last week, the B.C. Forest Service carried relatively reassuring reports on the existing hazard. Only in sections of the Kamloops and Prince George districts did it rise above "low". In those particular areas it reached moderate.

Nevertheless, since the beginning of the year, 58 fires have occurred and fighting them has cost $1,350. For the same period in 1969 only 16 fires had broken out and costs were $155.

Although at this early date no serious outbreak has occurred, there is a significant warning in the first report. It states that an unusually dry spring has followed a light winter snowfall this year and in some regions the ground cover may be dried out quickly. If that should happen as a result of warm weather, the risk of fire will greatly increase.

The message to the public and to industry is clear. This could be a dangerous year for the woods. The situation calls for continued and intensified care to avoid unnecessary outbreaks — and the time to start exercising the care is now.

FROM TORONTO — By HAROLD GREER

Shall Juries Die, Computers Preside?

ATTORNEY-General Arthur Wishart's casual disclosure of a few weeks ago that the government is thinking of abolishing trial by jury in civil cases in Ontario is bringing the lawyers to a slow burn which may cause the government to change its mind. But the lay public appears to have received the news with remarkable indifference. It is not hard to see why: at $10 a day, jury duty entails real economic penalties for most citizens, to say nothing of the inconvenience and choredom involved. Even so, given the importance which trial by jury has traditionally occuped in the Canadian scheme of justice, the lack of protest over its proposed diminution is depressing evidence that the trend to dehumanized, computerized law is indeed far advanced.

Greer

Actually, the right to trial by jury is a highly qualified one. It is not in the Canadian Bill of Rights. The Criminal Code provides that everyone charged with an indictable offence shall be tried by judge and jury, except where otherwise provided for by law — which is quite an exception. Given a choice, most accused persons elect for non-jury trial and in fact only 2.7 per cent of all indictable offences are heard by a jury.

Disappearing

In civil law cases, the jury is disappearing. It is almost extinct in Britain, except in actions for defamation. It is unusual to have juries try civil cases in the prairie provinces and in the Maritimes — there hasn't been one in New Brunswick in the past 10 years. The right to jury trial is quite wide in British Columbia but only about 10 per cent of the civil actions in that province are so tried. In Quebec, a litigant can get a jury trial only in certain cases and only if the amount claimed exceeds $5,000, and then only by depositing an amount sufficient to pay the jurors' indemnities. There are few civil trials by jury in Quebec.

Alive in Ontario

Only in Ontario, where a litigant can get a jury trial simply by filing a jury notice and paying a nominal fee ($3 in the case of a Supreme Court action and $1.50 for county court) have civil juries refused to die away. They are not all that common but there can be no question that if the government decides to abolish them, it will be killing off something that has not yet died a natural death.

Mr. Wishart's reasoning is that of former Chief Justice J. C. McRuer in his Royal Commission Report on Civil Rights: they discriminate against poorer litigants. A jury trial increases the length of a trial by at least one-half and thereby increases the burden of costs on the unsuccessful party.

"The trial of civil cases by a jury is a procedure that has outlived its usefulness in Ontario," Mr. McRuer reported. "Instead of the jury being used as a protection for the weak, it is now a weapon in the hands of the strong.

"The conclusion we have come to is that the trial by jury in all civil cases, except those based on defamation, should be abolished."

These are strong arguments, of course, but they hardly justify throwing out the baby with the bath water. If costs of jury trials are a consideration influencing less affluent litigants, then it should not be beyond human ingenuity to change the law concerning the awarding of costs so as to ensure that the rich and the poor are on an equal footing.

Similarly, the public's attitude towards jury duty generally, criminal cases as well as civil, would probably improve if jurors were paid indemnities and expenses at least commensurate with a living wage. Most citizens would accept jury service as a duty of citizenship if it did not entail financial hardship.

They would have every reason for doing so, because unless the jury system can be rescued and redeveloped, the law and justice will become completely the plaything of the lawyers, the preserve of the judges and the monopoly of the bureaucrats. Most people do not know what goes on in the courts because they are never in them; I suspect they would be shocked by the brusqueness, the lack of humanity, the absence of plain common sense which is all too often apparent. We are very close to mechanical justice and the stage, which some have already mooted, where judgments and sentences will be read-outs from a computer.

Instrument of Participation

The jury system is the last instrument of citizen participation in the courts and we ought to be finding ways of enhancing their importance and increasing their use rather than allowing them to disappear. The law, it may be said, is too important to be left to the lawyers and the jurists. Sick persons, for example, are constantly being sent to jail by judges who bewail the monstrosity of a law which gives them no alternative; one cannot help but wonder if juries in their wisdom would be so fatalistic.

In civil cases, it is the function of juries to decide the facts and assess damages. We are going to need more of this in the future rather than less, and in areas (damages from pollution, for example) where existing law and legal concepts are hopelessly sterile and antiquated. The law, it may be said, evolves with society. But it will evolve a lot faster if there are more juries of laymen in the courts to help it along.

SOME DISTORTIONS — By C. L. SULZBERGER

Television Camera: Grim Realism Is a Powerful Weapon

"DOES television by its very presence at an event help to create an explosive atmosphere of excitement and disorder?" This question, posed in the current London Encounter by the highly regarded British television commentator, Robin Day, undoubtedly lies at the source of many contemporary political headaches. It is certainly one of the most important weapons in the Southeast Asian war. The fact that almost every home in the United States possesses a receiver while virtually no home in North Vietnam has one is an incalculable advantage to Hanoi which aims its propaganda at the American public. The London Economist wrote:

Sulzberger

"The United States is the first free country that has ever tried to fight a televised war under the rules of democracy — free reporting, opinion polls, the lot — and if the result has been the unsurprising discovery that people loathe war that is something that all democracies will have to chew over in the future."

Sapping Will

Day goes further: "One wonders whether in the future a democracy which has uncensored television in every home will ever be able to fight a war, however just. However good the cause — self-defence, resisting aggression, or even fighting under the United Nations flag — the brutal details of military action may be there on the television screen to shock and to horrify, sapping perhaps the will of the nation to resist the forces of evil or even safeguard its own freedom."

The printing press was the first great invention for mass influencing the popular mind but, as Marshall McLuhan proclaims, the age of Gutenberg is over; with TV the medium indeed can be the message. In a crude sense this is quite clearly what Vice-President Agnew has been trying to contend in his argument that television can demonstrably help disseminate violence and undermine the impact of majority will.

As far as Vietnam is concerned, an initial mistake by Washington was to pretend from the start that it wasn't a war and therefore to place itself in the position of never managing to establish the kind of military censorship which the American press has accepted in other conflicts for reasons of military security.

Audacious, skilled television crews focus their cameras on the most brutal events, bringing all their shock and horror into the average American home or the homes of our better-heeled allies. Not only can these be magnified by the limitations of the lens but the non-event has also become familiar to the viewer.

It is possible to photograph a handful of demonstrators playing a deliberately exaggerated role or to interview spokesmen for the smallest minority demanding extreme actions. This gives highly distorted pictures of many situations, whether military or civil. Yet the camera crew cannot be expected to focus the TV public's private eye simply on bland majorities or dull operations. Not even newspapers feature dogs biting men.

Thus not only violence in Vietnam but violence in American cities is displayed with shocking realism. For the latter, both the implied or direct appeal for ruckuses and the techniques of how to accomplish them are shown to an enormous classroom.

Producing Backlash

Day believes the Negro revolution in America has been vastly accelerated by television. Philosophically this is desirable but the turbulent methods chosen risk producing an exaggerated racial backlash. Similarly, Day recalls how TV featured Czechsolovakia's brief surge toward liberalism and probably, as a result, "helped create a situation which led in turn to a major act of international policy, the Russian invasion."

The medium of television can strikingly if unintentionally distort events out of true focus. Day adds: "In a television service financed by advertising there is bound to be a general pressure to make programs with maximum audience appeal."

The problem hasn't yet been adequately studied because of obvious concern for impingement of freedom of speech and choice. Nobody wants a government hand in television; imagine what Goebbels would have done for Hitler with TV as well as radio to hand.

Can one, however, contemplate the other extreme — South Africa, where there is no television, or Greece where it is ladled out experimentally as if for stupefied mice? One must discover a golden mean and there is no sign that the search has seriously begun.

Convalescent Homes

I was very interested in two recent articles in your paper on the best use of hospital beds—the first on April 27 dealing with the proposed new grouping of hospital beds in Jubilee and the second on May 2 describing the system recently put into operation at St. Joseph's to limit more effectively the patient's length of stay.

However, I feel myself that these measures only serve to point up more forcibly than before one of the gaps in BCHIS — namely the non-existence of Convalescent Homes, which have long been a feature of health care in the United Kingdom. Before the introduction of the National Health Service in 1948 they were provided largely by private institutions — for example the Teaching Hospitals ran their own and some Trade Unions built them for their members and members' families. The National Health Act itself set up a certain number in every region.

Specifically the advantages of a convalescent home are, firstly — from an administrative point of view — that it shortens the patient's stay in hospital, since patients can be admitted there a few days earlier than they can be discharged home, thus ensuring a quicker turnover of hospital beds. Secondly, as far as the patient is concerned, it provides for supervised convalescence in an atmosphere totally different from that of an acute hospital (even in a 'self-care or sub-acute bed'), by allowing for more freedom of movement, yet with the reassurance that any relapse will result in immediate readmission to the acute hospital. Thirdly, from a financial point of view, convalescent homes are very inexpensive to run since all patients are ambulant so that professional services can be kept to a minimum, and the physical structures can be either large old houses which their owners can no longer afford to keep up or large new one-storey structures similar in construction to the senior citizen complexes. Fourthly, it must be remembered that not all hospitals in B.C. have grounds into which they can expand. In the thickly populated urban areas of Vancouver, for example, the hospitals have quite literally nowhere to go but up — a costly process!

It may be argued that the provision of 'home care' to convalescents — outlined in the last three paragraphs of the April 27th article — is the equivalent of convalescent home care and even an improvement upon it. Personally I doubt this, because at home the patient is not under qualified supervision all the time, thus allowing for relapses when no one is present to assist and also — particularly in the case of women — giving patients the opportunity to do too much housework too soon.—Elisabeth Richards, 4201 Glendenning.

Protest to W.A.C.

In my opinion everybody is going the wrong way about overhead wires in the Burnside area. As everybody knows, we have a one-man government in B.C. and the only way to settle the above question the right way is to force Premier Bennett to have the wires put underground (if possible). It is no use trying to deal with the B.C. Hydro.

I notice that not one of the MLAs representing Greater Victoria has acted in support of burying the power line. They are evidently under the thumb of you-know-who except one.

If everyone were to protest to Premier Bennett we just may get some favorable action.

I hope people will remember actions like this the next time we have a provincial election.—Pensioner.

Japanese Raping the Seas And Who Can Stop Them?

By ANTHONY PEARSON
Manchester Guardian

I climbed down into the freeze hold of the big Japanese factory ship lying in Kilindini, Mombasa Harbour, Kenya, and she was stocked high, compartment after compartment, with the biggest billfish I have ever seen.

There must have been close on two thousand billfish — black, blue, and striped marlin, broadbill swordsfish, and sailfish. The other holds were filled with yellowfin tuna, while the Japanese and Chinese catcher ships alongside continued to pile in their cargoes of fish.

All day, day after day, it continued. As one catcher left another would take its place and the tuna and swordfish went down into the freeze holds to be finally taken to Japan where a cannery would turn them into unidentifiable edible produce for the world's tables.

The experience left me feeling sick, not least from the sudden transition in shorts and light shirt from 98 degrees of heat to 40-below freezing. But the sight of those fish, many of them larger than the biggest fish any angler could reasonable dream of, was a terrifying sight, and the terror is no exaggeration.

I know that commercial fishing is necessary and desirable and that fish, a high protein food, is one of the answers to feeding the world's starving millions.

As a sportsman, my claims on fish stocks are small and unimportant, but at the same time, even though my reasons may be selfish, I recognize the need for conservation, the preservation of marine wildlife, so that I and thousands like me may be able to enjoy the sea and the excitement of hunting big fish but, more important, that the fish stocks remain balanced so that the oceans can continue to supply and meet the food problems of the world, particularly of underdeveloped countries.

The contribution of the Japanese fishing fleet towards solving the problems of world hunger is negligible. Consumer demand for their catch is high and is absorbed on the home market or else is exported to America and Europe, mostly as canned tunafish.

At the same time, the Japanese contribution towards the outright destruction of world fish stocks is very high. The Japanese are the most direct and savage threat to the complete annihilation of warm water species, and not only fish — the extinction or near-extinction of whale species in the Antarctic is almost entirely due to the uncontrolled killing of these mammals by Japanese catcher ships.

To the Japanese one fish is much the same as the next, except that some species have a higher market value than others. The suggestion that slow-growing, relatively rare fish species like marlin and broadbill swordfish should be caught objectively, so that numbers are not decimated too rapidly, amuses the Japanese.

They have fished out their home waters and those close to home, and they work on the principle that after they have fished out one area of ocean they simply move on to the next and destroy that.

Fishermen along the length of America's Pacific coast, around the Australian and New Zealand coasts, and now along the Indian Ocean coasts of Africa will testify to the wholesale slaughter and destruction by the Japanese fishing fleets.

The problem is that there is no legal means by which they can be stopped. They fish outside territorial waters and they make their factory ship base in the port of some country with no major fishing interest, preferably a country to which the Japanese government can give economic or scientific aid or negotiate a close association via trade agreements.

The centres of Japanese fishing activities at present are closely allied to non-fishing countries. There is a factory ship serving a large fleet off the coast of Kenya and another off the Canary Islands, which has one of the few unexploited fishing grounds of the Southern Atlantic.

There is still extensive fishing carried out off the coasts of Central and South America and in the Pacific off New Zealand, where local fishermen are protesting loudly against the slaughter of their billfish, without much apparent effect.

Unless you take the law into your own hands, like the Miami charter boat skippers who sailed out to the Japanese fleet armed with machine guns to blow them out of the water and who were only prevented from carrying out their threat by the intervention of the U.S. coastguard, there is no way of retaliating.

The technique of Japanese fishing is to lay down baited longlines, up to 50 miles in length and carrying thousands of baited hooks, between 40 and 400 miles offshore.

The hooks are set at varying depths and are baited with small fish, fish chunks, or squid. Species caught are mainly billfish and tuna (bluefin, yellowfin, or big eye, depanding on location) and sharks.

As the fish come aboard, their gills and fins are cut off, or, in the case of swordfish, their swords and, with sharks, their heads. Otherwise, nothing is wasted. Even the offal from sliced-out guts can be used as bait.

The fish are treated as they come aboard and in a matter of minutes are being pushed down into the freeze hold. To enforce any control on an operation of this nature is not only impractical but virtually impossible.

The secrets of Japanese catcher and factory ships are carefully guarded, and any boarding and investigation of them by outside bodies would almost literally have to be carried out at gunpoint.

Quarrels over territorial water rights have bothered the world's fishing industry for years but have tended to be localized quarrels. The Japanese have changed this, putting themselves in the role of international fishing privateers, striking wherever pickings are richest, stripping the grounds, and moving on.

Not only do they hit the world's fishing industry below the belt by their catching methods but also by their marketing techniques.

In 1966, after reaching agreement with the local authorities in the Canaries over the catching and landing of fish, the Japanese then undercut the Spanish by selling their catch on the Italian market, one of Spain's best, for half the price the Spaniards were asking, this being made possible by the extremely efficient and streamlined manner in which the Japanese fleet is operated.

Efforts by the United Nations in their Law of the Sea conferences, to reach agreement on some sort of international fisheries control have failed.

The Japanese were high on the list of dissenters, closely followed by the Russians, whose fishing techniques and total disregard for conservation make them almost allies of the Japanese and led to a Russian trawler being fired on by Australian prawn boats while fishing the Gulf of Carpentaria off the North Coast of Australia.

The inroads made by the Japanese fishing fleets into fish stocks of large game fish, billfish, and tuna, become more apparent with each new season.

On the East Coast of Africa, where the billfish grounds are among the richest in the world, the numbers of fish taken each year drop by about 30 per cent over the previous year.

There are good and bad seasons for every species of fish, but the decline of game fish in the Indian Ocean has followed an unnatural progress. In places like the Gulf of California, it has already been ruined beyond all hope of revival, and there are now grave indications that the marlin grounds of New Zealand's Bay of Islands, made famous by the writer Zane Grey and among the best marlin grounds in the world, have already been seriously affected by overfishing.

While the Japanese logic that the ocean and its fruits are there for the raping seems to satisfy the conscience of the Tokyo government and is tolerated by their American advisers, there will soon come a time, not so many years ahead, when even the Japanese will be hard-pressed to find fishing.

By then, some species will be extinct, not just in certain areas but throughout the world's oceans. Tuna are plentiful and fast-growing, like their relations the mackerel, but they can be wiped out, as proved by the bluefin stocks in the North Sea, destroyed by overfishing of German, Dutch, and Russian boats.

Marlin, sailfish,, and broadbill are slow-growing and delicate fish, easily destroyed. Their general worth as a food fish on the world market is small, unless they are processed by a factory and sold as canned tuna which often happens.

Like the blue whale, their value is more in their rare beauty than their nutritious qualities but also like the blue whale they are, in many places, already almost extinct.

What remains of the world's beautiful animals are protected in game parks. But how do you fence off the sea to protect the fish and the mammals in the same way and how do you explain the importance of it to people who see fish only as hard cash or a battered slab on a plate?

Ask Not for Whom the 'Liberty Bell' Tolls . . .

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON — In some lands children skppped around the pole celebrating the rites of spring on May Day, and in a great variety of cultures and countries millions upon millions of laboring men and women rested, for Friday was also the International Labor Day.

In the United States, however, it was Law Day. We can't observe it as workers' holiday, because there are no workers in America, only employees and personnel.

'We All Share'

We have nothing in common with the capitalist, socialist and communist societies where the day is marked by special ceremonies; we have no reason to encourage feelings of fraternity with laboring people abroad, because we don't have a working class. Here, we all share in the ownership of the factories, the railroads, the utilities, the mines and oil wells.

Law Day was begun 12 years ago by Charles S. Rhyne, when he was president of the American Bar Association, so that "on May Day when the tanks rumble through Red Square we would hold up law rather than force as the element that we admire most in our system."

You can't argue with that. The Russian military spectacles are more depressing than our own—possibly because the Ruskies seem to march with more precision than our unenthusiastic draftees.

This year, the American Bar Association tells us, 100,000 Law Day programs were conducted; even the ABA doesn't know how many Liberty Bell Award plaques (cost $12.50 apiece) were given by local bar associations to meritorious citizens; Bob (let the soldier boys die laughing) Hope was incessantly on the air in the form of minute spots adjuring us to "uphold the law and help obtain equal justice through lawful means."

The slogan for this year's observance was "Law—Bridge to Justice" and to back it up the ABA sent out boilerplates claiming that "Last year 38,000 lawyers worked for 1,500,000 needy persons — and for justice—without cost to them."

Welcome as Cancer

But for most people lawyers and courts are still about as welcome as cancer and twice as expensive. The profession has done little to rid itself of its reputation as the rapacious servants of property, except perhaps on May Day.

Only last week, with ironic timing, an American Bar Association committee came out with a report objecting to legislation that would allow consumers to file class action suits against companies that misrepresent and sell shoddy merchandise.

The committee members all come from firms with names that sound like Pickle, Sour and Dill or Squeeze, Chisel and Gouge. The committee members have clients such as the National Canners Association, General Motors, Standard Oil of California, and Firestone Tire and Rubber. Such people would naturally prefer Law Day to May Day. It's their law.

As a bridge to justice, the law appears to many people who need its protection the most to be more of a pirate plank. The biggest and most important law decision of our time, the school desegregation case, is still unenforced, while the president, a lawyer himself, gives free legal advice on the television to help people detour around the bridge.

It is for this reason that Yale University is up in arms. Many of them in New Haven don't believe that a Black Panther can get a fair trial.

Maybe they're wrong, but they've lost faith in the law courts. To show it, they've gone on strike and spent the weekend demonstrating. This will earn them a lot of criticism from the editorial pages where every year there is a dutifully printed piece in praise of Law Day.

Just Learning

The poor who've had plenty of experience with law in night court and with repossessing baliffs have never believed that the law was a bridge to any place they cared to go, but the middle class whites are just learning.

On this Law Day, blacks, students and younger teachers were not the only ones who have reason to reflect about what's at the other end of Bob Hope's bridge. More and more union members gulping to keep the inflationary waters out of their noses must wonder about the increasing use of the law to keep them at work and not striking.

As of now the law is being used principally against government workers, but recently George Meany suggested that labor contracts be concluded without ratification of the rank and file membership.

Judging from what's happening in the trucking industry, it is entirely possible that we will next see the labor bosses and the boss bosses going to the law courts in partnership to secure forcing the workers . . . pardon me . . . forcing the personnel to stay coupled to their machines like industrial villeins.

If this should strike you as peculiar, remember that the law, in the words of Bob (White House) Hope "is the key to promoting unity or purpose in our national life."

Students and the Long Haul

By ART STOTT

Down the Strait, white water curling from her bow, the towboat without tow beat against the evening wind, heading home. It could be a long lay-over. We watched from shore and thought of all the other tugs at their berths, or seeking them, and wondered when we'd see the patient work-horses again dragging their booms or barges across the mouth of the bay and what the tie-up would mean in summer jobs.

Stott

Without tugs to shift the logs, work in the woods could grind to a halt even without strikes in the forest industry itself. And seasonal work being particularly important to them, we speculated on the prospects of university students who must earn in the next four months enough to carry them through next year's studies. The outlook did not seem bright.

Manpower on campus at Gordon Head reserves judgment at this time. Officials there do not expect to determine the work trend this summer for another week or two, possibly more. But in Parliament last week a member noted March unemployment statistics revealing that nearly 40 per cent of the unemployed in Canada are under age 25. Youth obviously is going to have a harder time landing something than in earlier years.

Instant employment is available for only a portion of the young men and women who rose from writing examinations in the last few days and walked onto the labor market. At this date, it looks as if a substantial number of them will be dependent on student loan plans, provincial bursaries and other assistance. The process, perhaps more efficient now, carries a means test that isn't going to be whole-heartedly approved either by students or their parents. But the picture is not as dark as some think.

A student with a 65 per cent or better average on high school matriculation, or after first year college, shouldn't be excluded even if parents cannot contribute significantly to his or her needs. At the same time, parents in comfortable circumstances will be under greater pressure to provide help.

The Canadian Student Loan Plan has reportedly been slightly eased through government recognition of the impact of inflation on undergraduates. It is possible to borrow up to $1,000 a year, under that scheme, with interest charges of 8¾ per cent and repayment deferred up to 10 years from the date of the first loan. In addition, bursary assistance is available, on proof of student qualifications, from the province, and scholarships are given for those of exceptional attainment in their studies.

University authorities here figure the cost of an out-of-town student at between $1700 and $1900 per university year. That includes $100 to $200 for books, $460 for fees, $800 for residence, $150 for transportation to and from home during the year and from $250 to $300 for incidentals.

If there ever was a gravy train for students seeking outside assistance, it seems to have been derailed, but the track for the conscientious has not been cut.

The means test involves an assessment of parental ability to help. That is based on income returns from the preceding year. The family head, for instance, may be induced to take on the student's loan, guaranteeing interest if not repayment. Moreover, where the student lives at home, the residential costs may be minimized. The purpose, it is explained, is to make funds available for the serious student coming to the university from out-of-town.

There will be problems for those high school matriculants who want to go to university, who have booted things around in high school and, in consequence, grade lower than 65 per cent when they leave secondary school. If their parents can carry them, and if their qualifications are adequate, they can still go to university, but low grading in high school reflects on the seriousness of their approach, or on their ability to handle the work there.

These are factors that come into sharper focus as the gates to summer employment narrow during periods of austerity and dislocation. The university's concern centres more sharply on the serious, competent young person who, through no fault of his own, hasn't found summer work or derived from it enough money to keep him from September to the end of April.

The consequences may be less pleasant than in times of easy earning for the young, but the experience is educational in a way not always found in the lecture room.

Japanese Mining Firm to Prospect B.C. for Nickel

TOKYO (Reuters) — Japan's Sumitomo Metal Mining Co. it says it has reached a basic agreement with Nickel Mountain Mines Ltd. of Canada on prospecting for sulphide nickel deposits in British Columbia.

The Canadian firm has agreed to lease part of the mining concessions it owns in an area about 70 miles northwest of Stewart, to the Japanese firm for 99 years, Sumitomo said. The Japanese firm said it hopes to sign a formal contract by the end of this year.

Scandia

Scandia Mining and Exploration Ltd., has staked a group of mining claims in a new uranium discovery area in Eastern Township, Quebec, near the Vermont border.

Besides Scandia, other companies exploring the new region are Soquem, Rio Algom, Labrador Mining and El Coco Exploration. The discovery is credited to Soquem. Scandia's new property is located a short distance west of Soquem's main discovery and drill site.

Scandia expects to sign a drilling contract for the testing of targets on south Sturgeon Lake property in Ontario.

AGRA

AGRA Industries Ltd. of Montreal has acquired cable television interests in Western Canada from Famous Players Canadian Corp. Ltd.

Ben Torchinsky, president of AGRA Industries, said negotiations are compete for the purchase of Co-Ax Television (1962) Ltd. and a controlling interest in Lethbridge Cablevision Ltd.

The Co-Ax organization operates two cable systems, one in Weyburn, Sask., and the second in Estevan, Sask.

Lethbridge Cablevision provides service to Lethbridge, Alta. The AGRA interest will constitute 65 per cent of the company.

Central Del-Rio

Central-Del Rio Oils Ltd. and its subsidiaries had net income of $4 million or 13 cents a share in the first quarter of 1970, compared with $4.3 million or 14 cents a share in the corresponding period in 1969.

Gross revenue for the first three months was $10.35 million compared with $9.8 million, while cash generated from operations was $8.2 million compared with $7.6 million.

Gulf Canada

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. has abandoned its Inuvik wildcat well after reaching 6,300 feet. The Reindeer P-60 hole was spudded 18 miles north of Inuvik near the Arctic Ocean.

The drilling rig is to start a new well nine miles further north in the Mackenzie delta, Gulf East Reindeer C-38. Gulf has 1.3 million acres in its Reindeer block, and plans one further test.

Trans-Mountain

Trans-Mountain Oil Pipe Line Co. had three-month earnings of $3.2 million or 42.5 cents a share.

Corresponding figures for 1969 were $2.5 million and 33.3 cents a share.

Income for the three months rose to $10.86 million from $9.29 million.

U.S. Cuts Margin On Stock Buying

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. federal reserve lowered the margin requirement for purchasing stock from 80 to 65 per cent.

The reduction in the margin requirement had been requested by Wall Street to stimulate purchases and help to slow the falling market.

The board also cut the margin requirement for purchasing convertible bonds, securities that can be converted into common stock, from 60 to 50 per cent.

Both changes took effect today.

It was the first change in margin requirements since June, 1968, when the margin was increased from 70 to 80 per cent.

The margin is, in effect, the cash down payment required for a stock purchase. A margin purchaser normally leaves the stock with his broker as collateral for a loan covering the rest of the purchase price.

The federal reserve said there has been a "sharp reduction in the use of credit for stock purchases" recently. It said margin credit extended by brokers dropped from $6.7 billion in June, 1968, to $4.5 billion last March and the number of margin accounts dropped from 940,000 to 820,000 during the same period.

Wall Street sources said the New York Stock Exchange requested the margin cut to reduce the amount of cash required to buy stock and thus stimulate purchases.

VANCOUVER (CP) — April carloadings by Pacific Great Eastern Railway Co. reached a peak for the year with 8,776 loadings reported.

The increase was attributed to favorable weather conditions and firming lumber prices.

No Change in Mid-Stream On Uranium Policy—Greene

OTTAWA (CP) — Resources Minister J. J. Greene offered assurances Tuesday that the government doesn't intend to "change the rules in mid-stream" for foreign-owned companies that have been engaged in uranium exploration in Canada.

In a Commons statement, Mr. Greene said such companies that were engaged in exploration before the government moved, March 2, to block sale of Canadian uranium holdings to foreign interests will be treated the same as existing foreign-owned producers.

Detailed regulations on ownership in the industry are still being drawn up, he said, but he felt an interim elaboration of policy was necessary to overcome "the not unnatural concern" among companies planning exploration programs for the current year.

Outside the Commons, Mr. Greene said the government wants to develop policy that will encourage foreign investment but at the same time ensure Canadian control over resources development.

It is important, he said, that foreign investors be assured that Canada will not change the rules on them after they have put money into the country.

POLICY ATTACKED

Mr. Greene's position was attacked in the Commons by David Lewis (NDP—York South), who said the regulations will permit foreign ownership of uranium to grow.

Mr. Lewis claimed that present producers and explorers would be able to hold on to their properties forever. He noted that U.S.-owned Gulf Oil is said to be sitting on a huge uranium deposit and that Japanese and other interests would also be able to develop Canadian holdings under the government policy without restriction.

As announced by Mr. Greene, government policy will deem a company to have been actively engaged in uranium exploration March 2 if it held, before then, valid authority to mineral rights and can demonstrate to the atomic energy control board that it was exploring for uranium on its property.

The companies will then have until March 2, 1976, to demonstrate they have a commercially viable deposit within their claim. Actual production, or the production of a sales contract, will not be required within the six-year period, however, "in recognition of the presently depressed uranium market and the four to five years needed to place a mine in operation," Mr. Greene said.

The main restriction on such foreign-owned companies would limit sale of shares to Canadian residents until the total foreign proportion was reduced to 33 per cent.

"At that point," Mr. Greene said, "sales between non-residents will be permitted but in such a way that the 33-per-cent aggregate foreign ownership level is not exceeded and that no greater than 10 per cent of the ownership of the property is held by one foreign investor. . . ."

The Mother's Day Dilemma:

or "What to get for her because I have a 'thing' about going into Women's Wear Stores!"

by Wyn Sinclair

It's a pretty important day for a very important person and you wouldn't want to "blow it" just because you get a panicky feeling when you step inside a women's wear store.

There's no need to hang back, because our staff is most understanding and helpful. They'll make it easy for you to choose a gift for that special "Mom" by showing you our carefully chosen selection of handbags, gloves, scarves, sweaters or blouses, all ideal gifts for Mother's Day!

Perhaps we could make a suggestion that you buy her one of the new, fashionable "Carousel" wigs and, as we say at Miss Frith's, "you can be one of the beautiful people in an instant!" If you still can't make the big decision, we'll suggest a Gift Certificate.

If you're still shy about coming in, send Mother in to see the finest selection of ladies' wear and accessories in town. But, before you do, phone me and we'll make the necessary arrangements to greet her personally.

We strive to make everything easier at Miss Frith's, that's why we have our own parking area with extra-wide spaces, just across from the "Bay" on Fisgard Street. We're also half a block from the Fisgard Parking Facility.

Miss Frith Fashions

P.S.: Man to man, I'll help you select a Mother's Day Gift if you still have trepidation about facing the world of Women's Wear".

THE EXECUTIVE JET.™
CP AIR'S SOLUTION TO THE PHYSICAL AND EMOTIONAL NEEDS OF TODAY'S TRAVELING BUSINESSMAN.

We all have our needs.

And we're sorry to say, we can't help most people with theirs. But we can help the traveling businessman with his.

We've introduced the Executive Jet for all our cross Canada flights.

It's designed to let a traveling businessman work when he wants to work. And play when he wants to play. (We give you freedom of choice).

For instance, if you feel like working, just ask a stewardess for a dictating machine, or for stationery. She'll be happy to help you set up an office away from the office.

If you don't feel like working yourself, but would like to know how your money is working for you, just ask one of our girls for the Financial Post or the Wall Street Journal. We even carry a brief up-to-the-minute resume of marketing/financial information. (For the man who's not interested in those kinds of figures, may we suggest the ones in Playboy magazine.)

If you'd rather play than work (which we won't blame you for, either), just tell one of our stewardesses you're in the mood to play games. She'll understand. All Executive Jets carry grown-up games like Instant Insanity and Soma.

Perhaps you feel like doing absolutely nothing. Well, we couldn't think of a better place to do it. The atmosphere on board is always relaxed and informal.

Our stewardesses are great to look at, too. They don't wear uniforms that make them look like they're in the army. They wear what we call "non-uniforms." They're supplied to us by Canada's best-known retailers. So you know they're contemporary.

For instance, you'll see our girls in pant-suits, maxi-coats, and bell bottoms.

Women can find happiness aboard the Executive Jet, too. They won't have to dictate or read Fortune to have fun. There are dozens of other things to do.

So next time you're planning a flight within Canada, ask your travel agent to book you on one of our fourteen daily Executive Jet flights.

It's the other way to fly.

Bill WALKER

There often comes a time for musings, some of innocent nature, others of controversial tone. And this is proper. For it is good to leave Cambodia, and Viet Nam, and Kent State University. That outside world is a mess that nobody wants, but is stuck with, forever, it seems.

Because downtown in sportsville, and in many living rooms as well, there are other sundry items: What about this "One on Orr" thing?

Is Hockey Canada really going to stick it out?

These are a pair for the moment.

First, in St. Louis there is that nagging problem of how to stop Boston, impossible though it must seem.

Most observers spell it O-R-R.

Emile Francis of the New York Rangers said to win, Orr had to be contained. "He can win a game all by himself." That was the Francis appraisal of the Boston Super Star.

The Rangers tried, and failed. Chicago then went down quietly and without much protest.

Orr, meanwhile, roamed about the ice, almost unmolested. So did the other Bruins, but it was Orr's presence which lent substance to the Boston attack.

And now it is St. Louis which is faced with the same task. Stop Orr, then stop Boston, or try and do both things together. The task is not a simple one. St. Louis already has lost 10 in a row trying to stop anybody in the east in the Stanley Cup playoffs, Orr or no Orr. So they have little to go on.

But as they say in St. Louis, The "Ayes" had it when coach Scotty Bowman asked for a vote of confidence from acknowledged experts and St. Louis well-wishers on his strategic manoeuvre of the first game.

He had ordered a blanket for Orr. It came in a package called Jim Roberts, or Tim Ecclestone, depending on the time of day. Someone was to be Orr's shadow. Roberts was the prime candidate. If this didn't work, then St. Louis would soon expire. They would probably be roughed up a bit at any rate, but possibly life would be a little longer and more pleasant if Orr could be immobilized.

The reasoning was sound enough. Bobby Hull has always had close company in Stanley Cup play — Claude Provost of Montreal; Bryan Watson of Detroit; Eddie Westfall of Boston. They were always close by. Lines are specifically matched against other lines in defensive moves. Centres are called in to take face-offs in precarious situations. In baseball, they had the Ted Williams shift; In football they play a zone, with man-on-man if the pass catcher has an extraordinary talent. It is the same in basketball. And soccer.

Strategy has to be an integral part of the game.

But I don't know if shadowing is the absolute correct procedure.

A soccer veteran of a few years ago suggests that the term is wrongly used, or perhaps the method. It would be better, he says, to have Orr "covered," rather than have someone always at his shoulder. In this way he could be kept out of the play or contained to a degree that would allow for the strategy to work to its best advantage.

"He is so fast, that he can break away from a close checker; and he is such a fine skater that he can probably outmanoeuvre his shadow. But if he is marked with the object of not allowing him freedom of action, then the move may work."

This would be tantamount to keeping an inside shooter in basketball outside of the key. The defensive man would not be wholly out of the play.

So there it is — the stop Orr plan. It has merit. St. Louis must make it work, or else the National League will come to another early close, like next Sunday. Or perhaps, Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the item here yesterday that Hockey Canada is not about to change its mind about the use of professionals in world hockey immediately brings up the next question:

What about the future?

Perhaps a few paragraphs from a speech by Charles Hay, Hockey Canada president, will supply part of the answer.

Hay, commenting on attendance by Canadian officials at the world tournament in Stockholm, said:

"The importance of our attendance at Stockholm is that we have gained the admission from many nations, big and small, that pros and amateurs should play together. The Congress adopted a policy that should turn out to be the first step toward establishing this principle.

He added:

"It is the considered opinion of many that there will be established within the International Ice Hockey Federation some form of open competition. It is unwise to predict how soon this will take place or to the precise form it will take, but I suspect we are moving toward this situation more rapidly than we anticipate."

Come to think of it, isn't this what Canada said in the first place: Our best players are pros. We want to use them. Anything less would be less than satisfactory. So all is not forlorn.

Which is probably why Buck Houle and his Hockey Canada staff are still sitting around in an over-sized office in Toronto.

Waiting!

Rocks Have Right Idea Until Old Fault Shows

By STEWART LANG

Victoria Shamrocks of the Western Lacrosse Association came in like lions Tuesday night in the second game of the third annual pre-season Greenwood tournament — but went out like lambs.

In short, the Irish bobbled a 7-2 lead with the same third-period slump which marked their play last season, and had to settle for a 10-10 tie with Vancouver Burrards before 750 fans at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Shamrocks lost the opening game of the tourney when New Westminster Salmonbellies scored four unanswered goals in the third period for a 12-8 win.

Victoria next faces Coquitlam Adanacs in Richmond, Saturday, for the final game of the series which each year provides funds for promotion of minor lacrosse throughout the province.

Brent O'Janen paced the Vancouver attack with four goals, including three in the final 20 minutes.

Other lone Vancouver tallies were supplied by Bill Rawson, Spencer Rea, Brian Davidson, Ross McDonald, Bob Salt and Duke Leibscher.

TWO NET THREE

Nirmal Dillon and Denis Sonner led the Shamrock offence with three goals each while singles were added by Bill Spotswood, Ken Alexander, Ranjit Dillon and Muzz Bryant.

Both goalies, George Grover for Victoria and Don Hamilton for Vancouver played outstanding games. Grover stopped 28 shots while Hamilton nullified 30

After starting the second period with a 3-1 edge, Shamrocks seemed content to coast until the 10-minute mark when their offence caught fire enough to produce three goals within the next nine minutes for a 4-1 period score.

Here their defence was tight. In the third period, however, things looked different — or rather reminiscent of last season.

DEFENCE SLACK

Shamrock defencemen failed to take out their man, allowing Vancouver forwards to gain enough time to set up scoring situations in which Grover had little chance.

O'Janen brought Vancouver within one goal (10-9) at 15:38 with a fake to the left before scoring on a long shot from the right.

Rawson scored the tying goal after receiving a pass from Brian Ainsley.

After the tame, co-coaches Bert Bertoia and Ron Jay seemed unanimous in their explanations of what went wrong.

"We forgot what we did in the first two periods — run and check," said Bertoia.

Jay, while addressing the players, said: "We played their game in the third period. We were ahead like last year and panicked in the third."

Faceoffs too, seemed to be the Rocks' Achilles heel.

The Victoria team won only 11 of the 33 draws.

INVITATIONS ARE OUT FOR "Y"-TIMES MEET

Invitations are now in the mail in order to bring together a high-calibre officiating team for the annual YMCA-Daily Times-sponsored international track and field meet June 26-28.

The early groundwork is meant to assure the availability of a sufficient number of officials for the Island's largest annual track affair.

Centennial Stadium will again be the site of competition.

Prep Track Finals Awarded Victoria

British Columbia's Federation of School Athletic Associations has awarded the 1970 provincial high school track and field championships to Victoria.

Athletes from throughout the province will compete in Centennial Stadium June 12-13 to culminate a series of local meets held at the same location.

The Greater Victoria championships will be held on May 22 with eliminations at Centennial Stadium during the previous week.

On June 5-6, athletes from as far north as Port McNeill will compete in the Vancouver Island championships.

Mount Douglas will defend the Island team championship.

Drapeau Has Blessings Of Premier

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau left for Amsterdam Tuesday convinced that early spadework and a strong presentation to International Olympic Committee delegates there Sunday will bring Montreal the 1976 Summer Olympics.

The Montreal mayor left with two blessings. Roger Beauchemin, president of the city's chamber of commerce, told a joint news conference that Drapeau has the "100 per cent backing" of the organization.

Earlier, premier-elect Robert Bourassa assured Drapeau that his new Liberal government supports Montreal's bid.

Montreal, Moscow, Los Angeles and Florence, Italy, are bidding for the 1976 Summer Games, while Vancouver, Denver, Seon, Switzerland, and Tampere, Finland, are in the running for the Winter Games the same year.

Each city will make its 40-minute pitch Sunday and Monday, with the IOC delegates scheduled to vote on the sites next Tuesday.

Canucks Set Crowd Mark

VANCOUVER (UPI) — National Hockey League-bound Vancouver Canucks not only had a good 1969-70 season on the ice but they fared pretty well at the box office too.

In their final year in the Western Hockey League, the Canucks set a new league attendance record by drawing 330,138 fans to 36 regular-season games.

Another 58,981 persons crammed the Pacific Coliseum for six play-off games, bringing the total paid attendance for the regular season and the playoffs to 389,119.

Bruins Run Streak To Eight Straight With 6-2 Victory

SPORTS

Editor: Doug Peden

ST. LOUIS (CP) — Coach Harry Sinden doesn't want to be overconfident but he could afford to be as he leads his Bruins back to Boston today holding a 2-0 edge over St. Louis Blues in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup final.

The Bruins whipped the Blues 6-2 Tuesday night and the series now goes to the third game in Boston Thursday night and the fourth Sunday afternoon.

"Nothing in sports is ever guaranteed," Sinden said after the game Tuesday when asked if the series would end in the minimum of four games.

But he was satisfied that the Bruins had in fact overpowered the Blues, as the score showed. Boston won the first game Sunday by a 6-1 score but Sinden said later that the Blues were as good as the Bruins despite the difference in goals.

The Bruins outplayed the Blues and outshot them 35-19. Goalie Gerry Cheevers, despite the light work load, made several big saves for the Bruins.

"We had the goaling and the defence and were generally staying away from bad penalties," said Sinden. "I'll be disappointed if we lose the next game.

"We've now got eight straight wins, we didn't do that all year."

Orr, Esposito Also Rewrite Book

The eighth consecutive win tied the record in one playoff year first set by Montreal Canadiens in the 1944 series.

Centre Phil Esposito and defenceman Bobby Orr each broke a playoff scoring record with the assists they picked up on the Bruins first goal of the night by Fred Stanfield.

The assist gave Esposito 22 points to break the record of most points by any player set in 1962 by Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks. Esposito later picked up an assist on the Bruins' fourth goal.

Orr, with another assist later on Eddie Westfall's second goal of the night, pushed his scoring total to 18 points, breaking Tim Horton's 1962 record for defencemen of 16 points.

Blues coach Scotty Bowman had assigned Jim Roberts and other left wingers to shadow Orr in Sunday's game, but Tuesday night Roberts stayed close to Orr for only two shifts in the first period, which ended with the Bruins leading 3-0.

"After that it didn't matter any more," Bowman said after the game.

"I would say they were about twice as good as us tonight. We haven't got it, let's face it.

"They were playing soundly . . . we're not checking very well, said Bowman.

Record Crowd Started Early Exit

Derek Sanderson scored twice along with Westfall and veteran left-winger Johnny Bucyk and Stanfield got the single goals.

Terry Gray and Frank St. Marseille scored for the Blues.

St. Marseille's goal came with Boston right-winger Johnny McKenzie in the penalty box to give the Blues a total of 17 power-play goals in the playoffs.

The Boston power play got its 13th of the playoffs on Sanderson's first goal midway through the second period.

Rookie goalie Ernie Wakely looked shaky in the St. Louis nets and one of his biggest mistakes of the night came on Sanderson's second goal early in the third period.

Wakely made a glove save on one shot and dropped to his knees with Sanderson standing over him. The goalie fumbled the puck and Sanderson wasted no time knocking it into the net.

Centre Red Berenson was one of the few Blues who had good scoring chances, but just as in the first game, he failed to finish off his plays.

There were five minutes remaining in the game when Bucyk wrapped up the scoring and many of the record crowd of 17,506 fans started leaving.

JETS WIN Allan Cup 'Leaves' Canada

SPOKANE (CP) — Spokane Jets fans streamed on to the ice Tuesday night with a roof-rattling chant of: "We're No. 1, we're No. 1."

Jets had just become the first United States team to win in 62 years of play for the Allan Cup, emblematic of Canadian senior hockey supremacy.

The Jets, with great goaltending from Seth Martin, tripped Orillia Terriers 6-3 in the sixth game Tuesday before a howling crowd of 6,278.

Coach Al Rollins, clutching his third Allan Cup (he was on two winning teams as a goalie) headed for a celebration. Losing coach Ike Hildebrand and his crew headed for the airport and home.

All games were played here. Jets won the opener, 5-2, the second 5-0, lost the next two 5-2 and 6-2, then took a 3-2 hold on the best-of-seven series with a 2-1 win Sunday.

GOALIES SPARKLE

Martin was a standout—almost matched by Gerry McNamara, the Toronto insurance man in the Orillia nets.

Tom Rendall scored twice for the Jets and other goals came from Buddy Bodman, John Thompson, Dave Toner and Gord Turlik. Toner scored the winner on a fine pass from Gail Holden.

Gary Millroy, Clare Alexander and Al Osborne scored for Orillia, the rags-to-riches team which defeated Victoriaville, Que., Tigers in the Eastern Canada final.

Spokane, the Western International League team that defeated St. Boniface, Man., in the western final, was in the Allan Cup finals on 1957 but bowed to Whitby, Ont.

Some Spokane players have taken out U.S. citizenship but all came here from Canada. In Rollins' three years here, they have won three league titles, three playoff crowns and now the Allan Cup.

The Ontario crew rose through intermediate ranks before entering senior hockey four years ago, then fought their way up from the cellar to the eastern title.

Ausies' Trip To Sidelines Earliest Ever

BANGLORE, India (AP) — India upset Australia with a clinching singles victory by Premjit Lall Tuesday and won the Eastern Zone title in the Davis Cup tennis competition. The margin was 3-1, with one match unfinished.

The Indians next play the winner of the European Zone-B, which is still be contested.

Lall, a veteran of the Indian team, defeated Dick Crealy of Australia 8-6, 6-2, 6-2. In the final singles, which could not affect the outcome, the match between Ray Ruffels of Australia and Jaideep Mukerjea of India was halted by darkness with the score 6-6 in the fifth set.

It was the first time in history that Australia had been beaten so early in the tournament. The Aussies dominated the competition for years, winning the cup 22 times — more than any other country.

Red Deer Coach Wooed by Royals

RED DEER, Alta. (CP)—Alf Cadman, coach of Red Deer Rustlers in the Alberta Junior Hockey League, says he has the opportunity to get involved with New Westminster Royals.

Cadman said in an interview Tuesday after a weekend meeting in New Westminster that he has a chance to get control or to get involved, but he hasn't made up his mind.

It would "have to be worth my while," he said.

He declined to say what proposals he received or what capacity with Royals was discussed.

He said he was "listening and thinking" and would not make a decision before the end of next week.

Dick Spring, general manager of the B.C. Junior Hockey League Royals, the man who asked Cadman to New Westminster for the weekend meeting, was not available for comment Tuesday night.

Spring said earlier he would recommend community participation, through the New Westminster Minor Hockey Association, in any group taking over Royals. He was polling members and was to advise Cadman of the results.

Spring has said he is willing to step aside for any group with proven financial and player resources. Royals finished a distant last in the seven-team BCJHL last season.

North Stars Appreciate Burns' Role

ST. PAUL (AP) — The president of Minnesota North Stars says Charlie Burns is the leading candidate to coach the National Hockey League club in 1970-71.

But Walter Bush, Jr., says it will not be decided until late this month whether Burns, playing coach last season, will return to the bench as a player or coach.

"Our club played its best defensive hockey while Charlie was in uniform," Bush said. "Nothing regarding his status has been determined. He's still a player and will continue to be until the coaching job is filled."

Burns, meanwhile, said he will have no comment until he meets with general manager Wren Blair later this month.

Big Innings Give Century Softball Win

Two three-run innings paved the way as Century Inn overran William Head Steelers 7-2 Tuesday in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Heywood Avenue Park.

Flay Hall's home run brought in Gord Rutherford in the first inning after the latter had singled in leadoff batter Jim Buchan.

In the fifth inning, Rutherford singled in Ian Stewart and then reached home plate, along with Don Frampton, on a fielding error by Steelers.

Leonard Larson led William Head batters with a home run in the fourth.

Lawson's Timely Hit Sparks Molson Squad

Shortstop Dan Lawson's bat provided the difference Tuesday as Molsons downed Langford Drywall 3-1 in a Victoria Major Men's Softball League tussle at Central Park.

Lawson rapped out a triple — his only hit of the night — to score both Bill James and Jim Morgan in the three-run fourth inning.

James had reached first with a single and advanced on an error and a passed ball. Morgan moved into striking distance with a fielder's choice before Lawson connected.

Lawson later ran home on Gerry Lavendar's sacrifice fly.

Winning pitcher Glen Bullen struck out eight batters and allowed only one hit after relieving started Larry Jay in the fourth inning.

Shannon Shows Recovery Signs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Third baseman Mike Shannon of St. Louis Crdinals is being allowed to exert himself under close supervision this week to set the stage for tests that will determine whether he is recovering from a rare kidney disorder, Clomerulo nephritis.

The condition was discovered in spring training.

The 30-year-old Redbird spent one month in hospital and has been treated at home for the last month.

Shannon started his first workout with calesthenics and some running and fielding practice. Then he moved to the batting cage.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT By SAM POLLOCK

Beliveau Not Certain of Job!

MONTREAL (CP) — Sam Pollock, looking for ways to improve on Montreal Canadiens' dismal National Hockey League performance this season, says some of his players—including captain Jean Beliveau—may be playing elsewhere next season.

Pollock, Canadiens' general manager, said in an interview Tuesday the biggest improvement in the team that finished out of the NHL playoffs for the first time in 22 years, "must be in attitude."

"Some of the players who didn't work as hard as they should have are in for a helluva shock this summer.

Pollock spoke after meeting centre Beliveau, and indicated that even the team captain could be looking for work in the fall.

"We're not building our club depending on him."

Beliveau, in his 17th season, had 19 goals and 30 assists after getting off to a slow start and suffering an ankle injury.

Mentioning that many young players are coming up, Pollock said:

"Jean Beliveau is the most unique and most honorable person I've come across and basically he will do anything we ask of him. At the same time, I can't say Jean is guaranteed a spot on the team next season.

"But then, you can't say that any player is guaranteed a place next season. . . ."

Despite the shock of missing the playoffs, Pollock wasn't entirely displeased with the Canadiens' showing.

"In many ways it was a remarkable year when you consider that our forwards missed a total of 75 games through injuries," he said.

"Until the last week of the schedule the Canadiens were still in the running for the division title. We wound up only seven points below the best team in the league and three goals out of the playoffs."

Brewers Get Hops But Wrong Variety

By The Associated Press

The ball is beginning to bounce right for Tommy John and Chicago White Sox, but Gene Brabender and Milwaukee Brewers still get nothing but bad hops.

John, backed by five double plays, hurled the White Sox past Cleveland Indians 2-1 Tuesday night for their fourth American League victory in the last five games. The Chicago left-hander has won his last two starts after a string of five straight setbacks.

Brabender pitched five perfect innings, then was raked for five runs in the sixth, as Boston Red Sox blanked Milwaukee 6-0 behind Sonny Siebert's three-hitter, extending the Brewers, losing streak to nine games.

In other league action, Tony Oliva powered Minnesota Twins to an 8-5 verdict over Detroit Tigers, Baltimore Orioles rode four home runs to a 7-3 victory over Kansas City Royals, Oakland Athletics rocked New York Yankees 11-3 and Washington Senators downed California Angels 6-1.

John scattered six hits at Cleveland, where the White Sox and Indians tied a major league record by combining for nine double plays. Luis Aparicio's run-scoring double off Dean Chance in the fifth inning snapped a 1-1 tie.

Brabender, who had beaten Boston nine days ago for his lone-victory of the season retired the Red Sox in order for 5 1-3 innings, then walked Tom Satriano. Siebert followed with a double into the left field corner, and before the inning was over, Brabender was behind 5-0.

Reggie Smith's bases-loaded double delivered the first two runs; Tony Conigliaro singled another home; George Scott drew a bases-loaded walk and the fifth run crossed the plate on an error by third baseman Tommy Harper.

SURGERY date has been set for Detroit Red Wings' Gordie Howe. The 42-year-old National Hockey League veteran will undergo surgery on left wrist May 26. Arthritic wrist bothered Howe during most of past season but he still finished with 71 points.

Suspended Player's Case Under Review

Trail's Milo Fabro, president of the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Associaton, will take a second look at the case of a Saanich minor player who last week was suspended until Dec. 31, 1970.

The player, whose name was not released, was suspended "for irresponsible conduct and abusive language."

Ted Adkin, president of the Saanich Minor Hockey Association, spoke to Fabro by telephone Monday after sending a telegram inquiring as to the reason for the suspension. The re-investigation is expected to take a week or more.

The incident is alleged to have taken place during the Vancouver Island peewee championships in Powell River during the weekend of March 14 and 15.

Chelsea Obtains Millwall Forward

LONDON (AP) — Chelsea, winner of the English Soccer Cup, paid $240,000 Tuesday for Millwall forward Keith Weller.

The transfer deal was completed too late for Weller to join Chelsea on a tour of South America. The team had left for Caracas a few hours before.

Tiant Walks Nine But Still Wins

"He's so tough on us," said Siebert of the luckless Brabender, who has lost four times. "I knew he had a no-hitter, but I didn't realize mine was the first hit."

Oliva drove in two first-inning runs with his fourth homer, laced a run-scoring single in the third and added three more RBIs in the fifth with a bases-loaded triple, leading the Twins' assault on Detroit's Mickey Lolich.

Luis Tiant picked up his fifth mound victory without a loss, but needed relief help in the sixth after yielding two hits . . . and a club record of nine walks.

Dave Johnson's two-run homer in the fourth inning overcame a 2-1 Kansas City lead and touched off the Orioles' long-ball barrage. Elrod Hendricks followed with a bases-empty blast; Brooks Robinson connected with one on in the fifth and Boog Powell had a seventh-inning solo.

Dave Duncan stroked four hits, including a double and single in Oakland's six-run eighth-inning spree, as the A's ended the Yanks' winning string at five games behind the six-hit pitching of Jim (Catfish) Hunter.

Lee Maye paced the Senators with two hits and as many RBI while ex-Angel southpaw George Brunet checked his former mates with late relief help from Horacio Pina.

Aaron Collects 564th Career Clout

Clete Boyer exploded two homers and Hank Aaron pounded one out of spacious Atlanta Stadium to lead Atlanta Braves' 12-6 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates in National League action.

"Two homers, that's hard to believe, isn't it?" said Boyer, better known for his fielding exploits at third base than his long-ball hitting.

The home run ball bounced around the rest of the National League as San Diego Padres stopped Philadelphia Phillies 11-8, Cincinnati Reds turned back St. Louis Cardinals 5-1, Houston Astros dropped Chicago Cubs 3-1, Los Angeles Angels trimmed New York Mets 4-0 and San Francisco Giants beat Montreal Expos 4-1.

Aaron's homer was the 10th this year and 564th of his fabulous career. He is also only 14 away from the magic 3,000-hit career mark.

Aaron's two-run blow capped a seven-run first inning for the Braves that actually decided the issue. Hoyt Wilhelm made his 998th appearance, bailing out Braves' starter and winner George Stone in the seventh.

Clarence Gaston's two-run homer keyed a four-run ninth that propelled San Diego over Philadelphia. The Padres battled back after the Phillies scored seven runs in the opening frame and bolted ahead when Steve Huntz hit a leadoff double in the ninth and Gaston unloaded his fourth homer.

Lee May and Bobby Tolan lashed homers in support of Wayne Simpson's three-hit pitching as Cincinnati swept to its seventh straight. Richie Allen had his eighth homer for the Cardinals.

Norm Miller clouted a homer behind Larry Dierker's four-hitter as Houston handed the slumping Cubs their fifth straight loss.

Bill Grabarkewitz and Wes Parker each ripped two-run doubles in Los Angeles' victory over New York.

Bobby Bonds stole three bases and drove in two runs with a sixth-inning single in San Francisco's victory. The Expos scored their only run of the game on a ninth-inning homer by Adolfo Phillips.

Umpire Victim Of Head Injury

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Cal Drummond, 52, a former major league baseball umpire, died here early Sunday after collapsing while officiating in an American Association game.

An autopsy revealed Drummond died of a cerebral hemmorrhage in an area near to where he was hit by a foul tip in 1969.

Sports Festival Sendoff May 14

The British Columbia Festival of Sports will begin officially May 14 with a noon ceremony featuring Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

The two-week promotion, described as having reached "monumental proportions" by the government's travel industry department, is expected to involve "nearly 200,000" participants before it ends June 1.

Bennett, several cabinet ministers, B.C. Sports Federation officials and the Victoria Jaycees will take part in the opening ceremony in front of the legislative buildings.

Victoria-area events listed for the festival's opening weekend, May 16-18, include a rugby match between Victoria's Crimson Tide and touring Middlesex County of England in Royal Athletic Park on May 18 as well as an exhibition cricket match between Victoria and Vancouver at Beacon Hill Park.

1,500 HEAR CONCERT AT GUELPH FESTIVAL

GUELPH (CP) — The National Arts Centre orchestra, under the guest leadership of Karl Muenchinger, performed for about 1,500 people at the Guelph Spring Festival.

The results, wrote John Kraglund, Toronto Globe and Mail critic, were "generally rewarding, despite some slightly gimmicky programming and the uncongenial acoustical surroundings."

Lucy Now 'Very Interesting' As Laugh-In Starts Slide

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — For a couple of seasons now, the near-sighted German soldier on the Laugh-In television program has been bidding a somewhat mocking goodnight to Lucy. Now it's Lucy's turn to laugh.

The running gag, delivered by Arte Johnson of Laugh-In, bore obvious meaning inside the television trade. The Rowan and Martin show had been the first to challenge successfully the long-time rating supremacy of Lucille Ball on Monday nights.

But in its third season, Laugh-In started to display signs of wear. In recent weeks, Here's Lucy has been showing its oldtime strength, placing among the top 10 shows in the U.S. ratings.

The slide of Laugh-In was only natural, observes Lucille Ball.

"When you're the No. 1 show, there's only one way you can go: Down."

While she didn't wish the opposition any ill, she admitted she was not amused by Arte Johnson's sign-off messages.

"As long as he just said goodnight to me, it was OK," she said.

"When he started including Gary, I didn't think that was right. I didn't like having my husband brought into it."

Husband Gary Morton acts as executive producer of Here's Lucy. Her sister, Cleo Smith, functions as producer of the series, which also stars Miss Ball's children, Lucie Arnaz and Desi Arnaz Jr. Lucille admits it's cozy.

"But my nepotism has paid off," she adds. "I'm proud of the jobs that Gary, Cleo and the kids have done. We've got a smooth-running organization, one that really gets the job done."

Lucille Ball Productions is indeed a model operation for a television series. Her competitors admire the professional gloss and ease of performance. The sparkplug, of course, is Lucille herself, who is ever alert for ways to maintain quality.

"I always spring for the thing that will keep me interested," she explained. "I keep telling my people, let's go some place or try something new; in other words, let's give me incentive to keep doing the show."

BURTONS TO APPEAR

Among the new things for the 1970-71 season will be guest appearances by Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor. How Lucille landed the famed pair is worth a Lucy show in itself.

"I saw him at a crowded party and he pointed a finger at me and said: 'I am crazy about your show; you must have me on it.' I couldn't believe he was serious. When we went to the Burton's hotel bungalow later, I told Gary he was absolutely not to mention it.

"The next day I told him under no circumstances was he to call Burton or his agent. But then his publicity man, John Springer, called us and said Richard was anxious to do the show."

A script was concocted in which Lucy mistakes Burton for a plumber. It will be filmed next week.

With characteristic thoroughness, Lucille is already well into next season's supply of shows, which will include three on location in Hawaii. She will have finished the season before the first show goes on the air in the fall.

Narrates His Colour Motion Picture on SCOTLAND
FRIDAY, MAY 8TH, 1970, 8 P.M.
A motion picture story of the CELTS and GAELS; kilts and swirls, burrs and brogues. From the low road to the high road: cairns, plaids, tartans, thistles, kirks, firths, lochs and glens. This is SCOTLAND . . . fragrant heather, wind and tide, gaunt mountains, whitewashed cottages, bonnie lads and lassies, gloomy castles, pipes-a-playin'.

Farmer Voice Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition flayed the government in the Commons Tuesday for failing to promise farmers representation on a proposed national farm products marketing council.

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said the council would be "dictatorial" and manned by Liberal appointees. It should have producer representatives.

John Burton (NDP—Regina East) attacked the bill for offering no guarantee that farmers would be able to direct national marketing agencies.

They were speaking during debate on second reading of a bill to set up the council and national marketing agencies for farm products.

Mr. Williams said the government condescended in the bill to consult farmers at public hearings. But decisions at such boards were made before meeting the farmers.

CALLS IT 'DESTRUCTIVE'

He described the bill as the "most dangerous, damaging and destructive legislation brought in by any minister of agriculture."

He said the government's failure to guarantee producer representation on the marketing agencies "is a denial of all this government has said about participatory democracy."

He said, however, that supply management in agriculture is already practised by processing corporations.

The Commons also gave second reading to a bill providing for the establishment of a Standards Council of Canada. The bill goes to committee for detailed study.

The bill received second reading when a motion by John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) that would have in effect killed it was defeated 142 to 47 with the New Democratic Party and Creditistes voting with the government.

SAYS BILL 'COMPROMISE'

Replying to opposition criticisms of the bill, Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said it was a compromise between positions espoused by New Democrat and Conservative spokesmen.

The Conservative attitude was to conserve things as they are no matter how imperfect, he said. The New Democrats wanted to abolish everything and start with a standards council that has mandatory powers.

Under the legislation, the federal standards council would promote voluntary standardization of weights and measures, quality and performance of goods and industrial and commercial methods and practices.

Conservatives James McGrath (St. John's East) and Alfred D. Hales (Wellington) said they failed to see why the government is setting up the council when the privately-organized Canadian Standards Association already exists.

Mr. Pepin said he could produce a list of 50 industries in which the association had taken little or no action.

Barnett Danson (L—York North), a plastics manufacturer, said he found the standards association to be useful and effective, but it had taken a long time to develop standards in the industry. The association had also failed to get down to the consumer level in establishing its standards.

Commission Budget of $1 Defeated

OTTAWA (CP) — A motion to reduce the Prices and Incomes Commission budget to $1 was defeated Tuesday in a 7-3 vote in the Commons Health and Welfare committee.

Douglas Rowland (NDP—Selkirk) saw his motion die after verbal exchanges with Liberal members who accused Mr. Rowland of playing for "headlines in the papers" and not being "serious."

"I noticed the member wanted to put his motion before asking any questions of the commission," Jacques Guilbault (L—Montreal St. Jacques) said. "Is this serious?"

Les Benjamin (NDP—Regina-Lake Centre), who voted for the measure along with Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris), said the motion was not being put "facetiously."

"This is not to reflect in any way upon the personnel of the commission. It's a disagreement with the method and policy of the government," he said.

"It's to show that we don't believe that present methods being used to fight inflation will work because the people it is supposed to help are the first and worst victims of it.

Three Hours of Budget Agonizing and Not a Cent Cut

By JIM HUME

Victoria city council grumbled its way through close to three hours of budget debate this morning.

But at noon it still hadn't reduced a proposed operating budget of $21.1 million by so much as a cent.

Council is already committed to striking the mill rate at 37.5 for the general levy and to a slight reduction in residential taxes.

Treasurer James Bramley reminded council of its pre-capital budget vote promise this morning but pointed out that their endorsation of the mill rate did not mean they had to accept detailed expenditures.

"I would (therefore) recommend that any increases or decreases that you would care to make in the budget be made through or within the limitations of the contingency provisions," Bramley said.

But though council prodded, probed and complained about staff increases and rising costs, it was unable to come up with specific ideas to save money on the 1970 operation.

Ald. Tom Christie touched off the longest debate of the morning when he queried the number of staff members in the city's community planning department.

Informed that there were eight members and one yet to be hired to replace a former staff member, Christie wanted to know if the staff couldn't be held at the reduced number.

Total budget for community planning this year has been set at $98,300.

"Do we have to have this staff?" asked Christie.

Mayor Courtney Haddock said he felt the question justified and suggested that with the capital budget now out of the way a full review of all departments with view to money saving should take place.

As chairman of the police commission Haddock was later to ask for four more full-time police, the largest staff increase proposal in the city for 1970.

Haddock said if the city was run like a business the "bank would just say you've got so many dollars to operate on and you would cut your cloth accordingly."

He said he also wondered just what the planning department was doing.

"At first we had some major projects like the waterfront but that's all finished now as far as planning goes," he said.

"I just wonder what they're doing now."

He was quickly told by Ald. Harold Olafson and city manager Dennis Young who listed a string of projects still under way and vital to the city's growth.

Young also stressed that the planning department was not adding an extra man this year, merely replacing a planner who left the city recently to work for the regional district.

"In a growing city the problem is not how do you increase your staff, but how do you contain it," Young said. "You are seeing the results of a city's growth in services."

Ald. Peter Pollen said he appreciated the manager's point of view but noted that a more than 10 per cent increase in total budget for one department took some justification.

And he added that in his opinion the civic civil servant was rapidly "becoming the elite of the population."

It wasn't just the planners who came under fire.

Up on the rack for a few minutes was the Victoria fire department which last year logged 524 days off in sick time accoriding to Pollen.

"Somebody has to sit down and ask just what's going on?" Pollen said. "And I don't think anybody is doing that right now."

Haddock agreed that it was time the city sat down and examined its policies and its goals.

Both the mayor and Pollen denied that they were talking staff cuts. But Pollen at one point in the debate noted that "not a major business in this city hasn't cut staff substantially."

Pollen took several sharp swings at the now approved capital budget (the city's five-year $6.3 million play endorsed last Thursday).

"I didn't say anything before, but while we have approved this fire training centre (part of the capital program) in good faith I think it's time we started looking at the possibility of regional fire departments and regional police departments."

Later in the morning session Ald. Harold Olafson made a formal motion that the department of municipal affairs be approached with the view to amalgamating police and fire.

No vote had been taken at noon although the suggestion appeared to meet with general approval.

Saanich to Carry Out Management Reform

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Saanich council has agreed to revamp the senior municipal administration and appoint a municipal administrator.

The changes were approved by council at a closed-door meeting following Monday night's regular council meeting. Details were relayed to the 25 to 30 senior staff involved at a meeting Tuesday afternoon in the municipal hall.

Introduction of the administrator is the key change, representing a compromise between the municipal manager form of local government, in effect in Victoria, and the more common council-committee system.

Saanich will retain the council-committee system and the present structure of committees is unchanged.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said this morning the council-committee system has allowed Saanich to develop rapidly while retaining control of operations in the hands of elected representatives.

"Following intensive study and discussion of alternative management approaches, council has decided to retain a form of council-committee government but to achieve greater co-ordination of departmental operations through the use of a municipal administrator," he said.

ULTIMATE CONTROL

"Ultimate control of operations will continue to be exercised by council."

The position will be posted within the municipal hall and advertised externally "at an early date."

Curtis said the administrator will have the right to dismiss junior staff and suspend senior staff for cause, but this must be reviewed by council at its next meeting.

Other changes agreed to by council include:

Setting up four positions (already in existence) below the municipal administrator, who himself is under council, excepting the positions of clerk, personnel director and the yet-to-be approved full-time solicitor.

MAJOR CHANGE

These four positions are planner, engineer, comptroller-treasurer and assessor.

The major change here is placing the fire chief and his department under engineering. Previously, it was loosely under the comptroller-treasurer although largely on its own.

Curtis said the change will "achieve greater co-ordination."

Dropped from the engineering department and established on its own is the planner and his department.

Curtis said this was in effect what has already happened, "although on paper it was under the engineering department."

UNDER STUDY

There is no change in the police department, which will continue to report at first to the police commission.

Curtis said council has not made a decision about a full-time solicitor, although agreeing this was a recommendation of a firm of consultants. It was still under study.

It was expected that a municipal manager system would not be introduced, although it was considered early in the over-all study. Last March it was disclosed by Curtis that this system was not being contemplated.

The changes stem from a study of senior administration by a firm of management consultants, Kates, Peat, Marwick and Company.

The firm was hired by council last November. The decision followed by two months publication in the Daily Times of some staff complaints, among them workload.

Reason for the study included the fact that the basic administrative structure was unchanged for 15 years, that three senior staff are nearing retirement and tremendous population growth. Staff complaints, it was stated last November, were "part of it."

Curtis said today that "no final report has been handed to us" although he said there is "a written document."

The decisions by council Monday night "represent some major decisions agreed on." The work of Kates Peat was not completed — there was still to be done a job-content and salary review for senior staff.

Court Ruling Doesn't Waver Old Flag Man

It takes more than a B.C. Supreme Court ruling to down George Burnham.

Burnham, champion of the Red Ensign, lost the first round in his fight to bring down Canada's Maple Leaf flag in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday, but he says he's already going strong for the second round.

Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan of the B.C. Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that Burnham had no right to seek an injunction restraining and prohibiting the use of the Maple Leaf flag and a declaration that the 1965 proclamation of the flag is not legally binding on him.

'NOT ALLOWED'

Burnham said he lost this round because he engaged a lawyer.

"I was not allowed to speak, I was not allowed to say anything in court because I engaged a lawyer. My views were not taken at all," he said.

So now Burnham, who has been fighting to retain the Red Ensign as Canada's national flag since 1965, says he will take his case to criminal court and warns that this time he will be more severe than before.

"Now I'm taking criminal action against former Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson, the Hon John Turner, Minister of Justice, and the Hon. Pierre Elliott Trudeau — and I'm taking this action right away," Burnham said.

Burnham said his case has to work out this time.

"The flag is exhibit number one. It must be taken down and put into custody. The Red Ensign will have to go up because it is the national flag of Canada."

Spiny Beasties

Their official title is Echinoidea, but colloquially speaking they're just spiny sea urchins, which get their impressive Latin name for a distinct similarity with the European hedgehog. Diver David Sadler, 16, of 8590 Emard Terrace, picked up these specimens off the Ogden Point breakwater. He's holding them gingerly because the spines are poisonous—a good thing to remember if you ever bump into one.

Woman Wins Board Appeal Against Welfare

By PETER McNELLY

A provincial welfare appeal board Tuesday overruled a Victoria welfare department decision which denied a city woman's request for home care of her crippled husband.

The decision, subject to final approval by provincial social welfare director J. A. Sadler, will give the family needed assistance at home and the mother time to find part-time work.

Many welfare recipients believe they have no recourse beyond the decisions of social workers and welfare administrators, but appeals are quite possible under the provincial Social Assistance Act.

Tuesday's hearing, for example, was set up after the provincial welfare department received a written request from the woman for a hearing on the Victoria welfare department's decision.

Then, the regional welfare director for Vancouver Island, J. A. Molberg, set up an appeal board consisting of himself and two others. A hearing date was set.

TWO RESIDENTS

Appeal boards here are composed of the regional welfare director and two city residents, usually public health nurses, Family and Children's Service social workers, doctors or city officials. The welfare department may call to the hearing other persons who are familiar with the background of the case.

HEART ATTACK

A person appealing a decision may bring anyone he wishes to assist the presentation of his case. Often, the Low Income Group is called in on appeals by welfare recipients.

The recipient has the right to request only himself and the board be present at the hearing.

Provincial and city welfare officials would not discuss details of Tuesday's hearing, but the woman said she was appealing in order to keep her family together.

Her husband has been unemployed a year since suffering a heart attack. After the attack he developed multiple sclerosis and will never work again. He had been a bridge builder with the CNR for 19 years.

USUAL PROCEDURE

She said Victoria's welfare department had offered to place her husband in a nursing home at a cost of between $220 and $280 a month. Her request that city welfare pay the cost of having a male orderly care for her husband at home was denied, she said.

Molberg said appeals are not common and Low Income Group president Walter Olszewski agreed. Olszewski said he did not trust the appeal system because the board's decision can be overruled by the welfare minister and board members do not represent the poor.

CUBAN SHIP IN PORT

The 16,000-ton Cuban freighter Sierra Maestra came into the Esquimalt Graving Dock this morning to take on a load of eight used Canadian Pacific Railway cars.

The surplus steel cars are part of a large shipment sold to Cuba to help build up the country's transportation facilities.

Shipping agent George Dawson estimates the number to be between 150 and 180.

Also aboard the ship is 12,000 tons of ammonia sulphide for fertilizer, taken on in Japan prior to the ship's departure April 22.

The ship carries a crew of 50 and nine passengers. The passengers on this trip are architects and technicians who have been at Osaka five months, overseeing the building of the Cuban pavilion at Expo 70.

The Sierra Maestra leaves Victoria late Thursday, bound for Havana.

Allowance Cheques Sent Early

The Victoria post office has already received from the treasury board all family allowance, youth allowance, old age pension and social security cheques for early delivery this month in anticipation of a national postal strike.

The national Council of Postal Unions has called for a strike vote May 19.

Early delivery of the cheques, some of which were not due to arrive at the post office for another two weeks, has angered local postal workers.

Ken Darlington, president of the Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said the treasury board's action "indicates a degree of collusion between the treasury board and the post office."

"This is a very transparent effort to anticipate criticism for non-delivery of these cheques in the event of a strike," he said.

The Victoria branches of the Letter Carriers Union and the Postal Workers Union have formed a joint strike council.

U.S. OFFICIAL COMING

Nerve Gas Briefing Slated

An official from Washington State will join provincial civil defence personnel here Friday for a briefing from the federal Emergency Measures Organization on shipment of nerve gas through Juan de Fuca Strait.

The meeting, closed to the press, will be held at 11:30 a.m. or noon in the training section of Provincial Civil Defence headquarters, 506 Government, said provincial co-ordinator John Erb.

While the briefing will deal with classified information, he said representatives of various organizations involved will speak with reporters later.

"If there is anything to add I'm sure we will—although it just could be we won't have anything new to announce."

No shipping date for nerve gas has yet been announced by the U.S. Army. Civil defence officials have been promised 28 days' notice before any shipment is made.

Arthur Mayse...

THE WAR IN SOUTHEAST Asia has run up a tidy casualty list on an Ohio campus. Four students shot dead: others wounded by rifle fire or bayonet thrust. Those fierce old wafflers so eager for youth's blood to be shed may be well-satisfied with that visitation of law and order, Republican style. But I hope to God that Americans of conscience in a land founded on protest will cry out against this latest departure by their country from greatness.

The killing of Americans by Americans at Kent is yet another episode in a story that began badly and threatens to end in disaster.

A foreign war which the United States should never have entered, let alone expanded, has come home to roost. And it's most unlikely that what is happening down there will be averted by presidential warnings that dissent carried to violence invites tragedy.

It's late for such platitudes. Young people more than ever convinced that their country's course must be altered won't listen to them.

I expect that fact will be driven home by more and perhaps bloodier confrontations before this ominous year has proceeded much farther.

Dissent carried to violence conveys a warning and demands a cure. For the United States, the remedy is the speediest possible withdrawal from Indo-China, and concentration on domestic problems too long neglected.

Meanwhile, Kent has given martyrs to what some Americans now call the youth revolution. How long until that revolution approaches civil war?

MR. AND MRS. MALCOLM McSorley live in a colonial house at 2100 Munn Road. Their 36-acre tract begins at the Saanich border line and extends back through unorganized territory into the Highlands.

They built the house themselves, with help from a son now 16 years old. Until they learned what B.C. Hydro had in store for them, they were happy in the country.

"But a while ago," says Christina McSorley, "we were told that Hydro means to run an overhead line the length of our place. They want an easement 240 feet wide for their towers, and those towers will go straight up the mountain slope that forms part of our property."

It's a hill, actually, logged of its timber 20 years ago, but grown up in second growth. And it figures in a view which the McSorleys prize.

Naturally, B.C. Hydro would pay for this long, broad intrusion upon their acreage. However, they haven't the slightest wish to sell.

"It's heart-breaking even to think about," Mrs. McSorley said. "This is the place where we want to be, and we'll fight as well as we can. But it's like butting your head against a stone wall.

"We don't want their money or their towers. We've told them we'll give them the easement if they'll put their line underground where it belongs. In 10 or 20 years, I'm sure they'd have to do that anyway."

Malcolm McSorley, a manufacturer originally from Montreal, spent time in Victoria during the Korean war.

Later, the family moved to California, but McSorley remembered the Saanich Peninsula as an ideal area in which to make a home. So in 1964, they came up to buy their acres, build the house, and settle in.

They realize that power must be supplied where needed. It's the manner of the doing that appals them.

"Right now," Mrs. McSorley concluded, "it's starting with us. But others out here won't escape. This whole area will be a spider-web of overhead lines from a B.C. Hydro power station."

a slight exaggeration perhaps, but the lady was understandably emphatic. Also, she has a point. Those lines should go underground . . . and better now than later.

THE TIDES ARE LOW these mornings, and at the rim of sand flats laid bare as they rarely are, the seagulls find good pickings. Prominent on their menu are the little red rock crabs, their shells only two or three inches across, whose parade ground lies exposed.

Sharp eyes spot them. A flip of a beak turns them wrongside-up with claws and pincers waving ineffectually. Then the noisy, greedy feast begins, to end with a carapace scooped hollow, and a gull or two a little less hungry than before.

But only a little. Seagulls, as we've observed them, are everlastingly famished!

STUDENTS JUDGE CHICKEN RECIPES

Senior home economics students at three local schools prepared and judged chicken recipes sent in to a contest sponsored by the B.C. broiler marketing board. Testing for flavor are these Reynolds Road students, Bev Turner, centre, and Dianne Bainbridge, right, as their teacher, Miss Barbara Armstrong, makes notes of their reactions. Other points taken into account in choosing winners were originality, appearance and practicality. Students at Mount Douglas and Esquimalt senior secondary schools also helped choose the winning entries, which will be announced May 15. (Irving Strickland Photo.)

All-Woman Finance Program Geared to Fill Special Needs

EDMONTON (CP) — A financial program created solely for women by women is under way in Edmonton.

In fact, Financial Independence Plan, a division of Financial Life Assurance Co., now is training the first all-woman field force in the insurance industry in North America, said Norma Worton, director of the program.

The basis for the program began last May, Mrs. Worton said. Dr. A. G. Perroni of the University of Alberta department of business administration met with a group of Alberta women to discuss the kind of insurance women want and need.

"The women stated they didn't want just straight life insurance, but insurance with protection while their families are growing up, plus an investment scheme," said Mrs. Worton.

Dr. Perroni approached Financial Life Assurance with his data and Mrs. Worton took over and developed a plan.

The result is Financial Independence Plan, which is divided into two major segments—investment and insurance, Mrs. Worton said.

The investment portfolio focuses on a "buy Canada back" aspect. Fifty per cent of the annual premium goes into an equity fund that invests in blue-chip common stock of Canadian - owned companies, she said.

The insurance plan offers an immediate cash outlay for the woman's funeral expenses and a monthly cheque for the dependents paid until the woman would have reached the age of 50. There are other benefits, too, she said.

"If 10,000 Alberta women buy this plan, in 10 years we will control $60,000,000 of the Canadian economy," Mrs. Worton said.

The program now is working with the university's placement office to employ female students for the summer months to help market the plan.

Jubilee Auxiliary Plans Coffee Party

The Woman's Auxiliary to the Royal Jubilee Hospital will hold their annual spring coffee party Thursday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the nurses' residence. The party, convened by Mrs. W. R. Jeffs, will feature sale tables of gifts and superfluities as well as a raffle and door prizes.

Couple to Mark Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. George Roberts, 1410 Elford Street, will travel to Winnipeg Saturday, May 16, to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary at a family reunion.

The couple were married in Winnipeg May 19, 1920 at the home of a friend, Mrs. R. Griffiths, now a resident of Vancouver.

An open house in their honor will be held in Winnipeg at the home of their eldest son. Families will travel from Montreal, the North West Territories, Thunder Bay and Victoria to be reunited for the first time in 15 years.

Before leaving, Mr. and Mrs. Roberts will be honored at a reception by their Victoria friends. The reception will be held Sunday between 2 and 4 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Roberts, 611 Ralph Street.

CALGARY CAC MEMBER ADVISES:

Baby Happy With Love and the Basics

OTTAWA (CP) — It is not necessary to spend a great deal of money on a baby, Valeria Zacharias, president of the Calgary Consumers' Association, says in an article on baby needs in the publication Canadian Consumer.

"He needs a mother's time and love but he is as happy with clothing and equipment that meets minimum standards as he would be with the most expensive that could be bought," she says.

Mrs. Zacharias, who is careful to state that the doctor should have the final say on baby's requirements, reminds prospective mothers that the basic aim is always to keep the baby comfortable and happy.

"Another suggestion is to stick to the basics in any buying done before the birth, since you don't know how big the baby will be or what you will receive as gifts.

"Many purchases may be delayed for months, and a delay gives you time to decide your preferences and to spend gradually rather than ruin your budget."

Mrs. Zacharias says second-hand items are often a good buy, since babies may outgrow their equipment before it is worn out.

If such equipment is repainted, lead-free paint should be used because ordinary paint is poisonous and may be harmful if the baby chews on it.

General hints on clothing include that it should be easy to put on and take off, machine-washable and dryable, and require no ironing.

Along with detailed information on clothing, sleeping and feeding equipment and advice on bathing and changing the baby, Mrs. Zacharias has buying suggestions for such items as high chair and playpens.

She says that a good second-hand carriage, for example, is better than a poor new one.

"Make sure there is a good brake and that there is actually spring suspension rather than just a mock-up of it. Wheels should be strong and the frame should be sturdy.

"The carriage should fold up easily for car transport, and if the carriage-bed doubles as a car-bed, the baby can stay in it without being disturbed."

Although she says that a carriage which converts to a stroller and a car-bed can be handy, she warns that equipment which has too many uses may prove somewhat of a nuisance.

The carriage should be easy to push and big enough for the baby as he grows, yet small enough to fit into a car and whatever space is available for it in the home.

Women Needed On School Board Says Trustee

COQUITLAM (CP) — Bernice Gilmore believes more women, especially school teachers, should seek election to local school boards.

A former teacher herself, she was elected to the school board in this Vancouver suburb first in 1967 and again in 1969.

"I wanted to be on the school board because I felt I had a contribution to make," she said in an interview. "I had seen education from the teacher's point of view and it's important to have that point of view expressed."

Her work doesn't stop with the school board. The mother of three and wife of a Coquitlam alderman is also a member of a trustee-teacher liaison committee launched to improve communications.

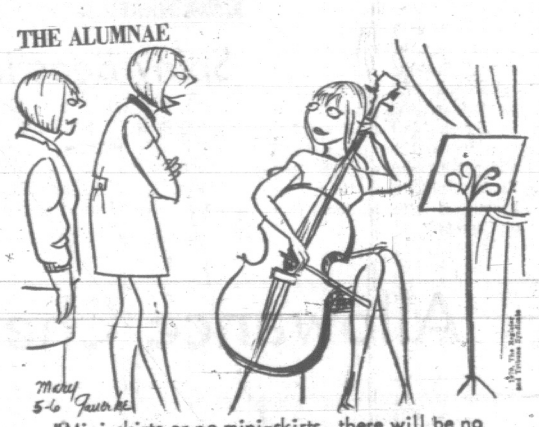
"We discuss mutual problems and exchange information," she said. "There is much less misunderstanding if we sit and talk things over.

"The public tends to think we meet only for salary negotiations in the fall."

She and another woman board member also visit one of the 34 schools in the district each week.

"Women are not tied down in the daytime like men and can do something like this," she said. "It is unfortunate there are not more women school trustees.

"They are vitally concerned with education and cangive a lot to it."



"Mini-skirts or no mini-skirts, there will be no side-saddle cellists in the Coon Falls Community Orchestra."

Fat Can Gain On 'Bird's' Diet

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — When a fat person complains he or she eats "like a bird" yet continues to put on weight the fatty may be telling the truth.

For Dr. Denis Craddock says he has found that many people who are overweight are born with a tendency to be that way and they may, in fact, eat even less than their thin friends.

But, all is not lost even for the hard-core obese. In a new booklet, Slim and Enjoy It, published by the Family Doctor Unit of the British Medical Association, Dr. Craddock suggests a multiple attack involving a change in eating habits, a choice of diets and exercise.

In the U.S., he said, about two-thirds of all adults over 50 are at least 10 per cent overweight. In Britain less than a quarter of adults in the same group are overweight but the proportion of British women is beginning to approach the American figure.

"An adult's weight should not rise with age and one's normal weight at 60 or 70 should be the same as at 25," he said, adding firmly:

"Middle-aged spread in women is not due to the change of life."

Dr. Craddock expressed sympthay for the overweight and what he called their special problems. "It seems to be," he said, "that hunger in the obese might be so ravaging and voracious that we skinny physicians do not understand it.

"A tendency to overweight certainly runs in many families. Most people who are overweight have either parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, brothers or sisters who are overwieght as well. It's been thought by some doctors that families become overweight because they all eat incorrectly or excessively. But, although this may be so in some cases, most people who are overweight are born with a tendency to be that way.

"People with an inborn tendency to be overweight are in fact different from other people. Recent research has shown that even in childhood some obese individuals cannot break down fatty tissue as easily as others and that when it is broken down their bodies cannot burn it up to produce heat as easily. In other words their bodies work differently from thinner people as far as the use of fat is concerned."

Dr. Craddock has a number of ideas, among them exercising within an hour after a meal because calories burn up more quickly then, and eating more but smaller meals up to five a day.

Calgary Models Find Marriage an Asset

CALGARY (CP) — To be a model in Calgary a girl needs one important asset—a husband to support her, says one model bitterly.

"There is not enough work here to keep a girl fed—although she might survive on the Mayo Clinic diet," adds a fashion co-ordinator at one store.

Work is seasonal, rates are low and there's price-cutting among models desperate for work and exposure.

Calgary now has about 30 full-time models — some of whom make a living at it—and about another 300 who model irregularly.

But people are going to have to get together if modelling is ever to become a full-fledged professional industry, said Bea Hayoz, 35, a fashion commentator.

She'd like to see agencies, schools, models and commentators united. Until that happens, neither professional standards nor pay are going to improve, she said.

The situation here had improved immerasurably in the last 10 years however, she added. Most local advertising features Calgary models, small stores that have never before had fashion shows are starting to hold them, hotels are showing an interest in fashion-show luncheons and local television is providing more work.

DO BETTER JOB

"People are beginning to realize professional models do a better job than anyone else," model agent Gloria Hutton said. "Things can only get better."

Most communities have modelling agencies, but everyone agrees the fastest way to lose money here is to try to operate an agency without a modelling school.

Anne Miller is one woman who tried. When she first moved to Calgary three years ago she found all the models making the rounds themselves.

She decided to take that job off their hands. She'd find the jobs; all the girls would have to do was show up for work on time.

For 2½ years she covered Calgary, "knocking on doors, which they kept slamming in my face."

"And smiling, smiling, smiling."

It didn't work out. Although she says other business pressures forced her to quit, she admits the agency was "a non-profit organization."

Agencies earn their money both from employers and employees — 10 per cent from stores, 10 per cent from models. Stores here simply refuse to pay the agency fee, she said.

"I'm just facing the fact that Calgary is a small-thinking city."

The only way to keep an agency going is to run a school as well, said Mrs. Hutton, who runs Savoir Faire, an agency and school. She calls her classes on self-improvement "the bread and butter of the business."

COSTS THEM MONEY

Many models refer to their business as a hobby. Sometimes it may even cost money.

Mrs. Miller said that a married model with children and living in the suburbs probably loses money on a single assignment.

By the time she pays a baby-sitter 75 cents an hour, leaves three hours early to have her hair done (minimum $4), pays car parking (25 cents an hour) and gas, she has probably spent at least $8.

If she's paid by the piceure, as some photographic models are, she might earn only $7.50.

That where a husband—or alimony, suggests one girl—come in.

A model can't run off from a job for modelling assignments if it's her only source of income, but she can't do modelling assignments if she's tied to a daily job.

Only with a husband can she keep herself free for a modelling job and not starve to death while waiting for the next one.

Spock Says Day Care Cuckoo's Solution

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Baby doctor Benjamin Spock has nothing against the aims of the women's liberation movement, but he opposes their proposal that children be reared in day centres while their mothers pursue careers.

He told a news conference recently such a plan would "drastically change a child's personality."

"Why have children if you're going to be a cuckoo bird and leave your eggs in other people's nest?" he asked.

Mom's Pet Pony Still Going Strong

SALMON ARM (CP) — Two young children in this north Okanagan Valley community have a horse.

It's not a very outstanding horse. In fact it's a 27-year-old cow pony whose back sags a little in the middle.

What makes it a rather unusual horse, however, is the fact that it belonged to the children's mother when she was a girl and now has been bought back to serve a second generation of the family.

The children are Karen and Kenny Collier, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bev Collier, recently bought the horse for them from Jack Smith of Salmon Arm.

Mrs. Collier's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Nichols, had bought the pony Dixie in Ootsa Lake, B.C., when she was three years old and moved her with them to the Salmon Arm area when their land was purchased by the government for the Ootsa Lake dam.

Before selling Dixie to Mr. Smith, the Nichols offered her to the Colliers who felt at that time their children were too small to have a horse. But a few years later, when they heard she was for sale again, they bought her.

Now Dixie is back in the family and spends her time taking the children for rides in the Fly Hills or mingling in the corral with the Colliers' other livestock.

Midi Teaches Expertise

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

The commercial fashion world may be suffering during the changeover from short to longer skirts, but students at Traphagen School of Fashion are having no trouble at all.

"Our students love the so-called midi," said Wanda Wdowka, recently elected director of the school. "Remember, for them, this bais-cut, unstructured look is entirely new. They're learning more expertise than they have ever had to use before."

Fortunately, Traphagen students have a museum collection of clothes at the school from whcih they can draw inspiration and which they can study for techniques. This year they have been concentrating on that part of the collection which covers the Thrities through the Fifties. The students create adaptations of these original costumes.

"Of course," said Miss Wdowka, "the students arene't merely copying. They've taken the basic techniques and given them a current twist. There are zip-off skirts, cape coats, culotte dresses, sleeves that stand up and out. The students are using fur fabrics for the first time in many of our shows."

With so many talented youngsters, it's hard to pick out a few for spotlighting, but certainly John Nickelson can be chosen as a coming name of tomorrow. His work stands out for a bold hand with technique, a dash in silhouette and a sophistication that marks him as a talent for the high fashion field.

John has used pale apricot double knit worsted for a long, lean suit, long of skirt, jacket and vest, lightly curved and belted, welt-seamed to accent the silhouette. His accessories include a brimmed grey felt hat, pale grey silk shirt, cobra belt and grey oxford shoes.

Jean Clarke has come up with a silhouette that some of us can remember from the Thirties, the long look made by tucking through the torso, then releasing the tucks for a softly flared hemline. She uses grape color worsted jersey for a coat and dress ensemble, with a big shawl collar of red fox on the coat, but with the modern look of a cardigan front and cuffed sleeves.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Sometime Lion

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: To the numbskull who insisted that quiet men are the greatest lovers. She should meet my husband. He is a quiet man.

I went with him for five years before I was able to convince him that marriage was normal. Now I'm having a harder time trying to convince him that sex is also normal.

He came on like a lamb, turned into a lion for one glorious year, then turned back into a lamb, and he's been one ever since.

I have tried to break him down by inventing a little game I call "calendar." I bought a packet of gold stars and whenever he breaks down, I paste a gold star on the calendar. There are 50 stars in a pack, and at this rate I will have enough gold stars to last me a lifetime.

When we are with friends he laughs and says, "I think I'll trade my wife in for two twenties." Should I remind him that he can't even take care of one "40"? I am 44, attractive, clean and normal.

If I had it to do over again, I'd choose a lion to begin with. At least that way I'd know what I was getting.—Marrie un Sunnymead.

DEAR MARIE: Yours is a rather special "lamb" who can turn into a "lion"—even for one glorious year. But knowing it is possible, doesn't that give you a clue?

DEAR ABBY: I am a physician, but please omit my name and city. This "problem" is one that every doctor has encountered, and even though I have my own way of handling it, I am writing to get your opinion.

The number of women patients who lie to their husbands about their age is shocking. They do not lie to their doctors, however. When I have a woman patient in the hospital, often her husband will corner me and ask me straight out how old his wife is.

Tell me, Dear Abby, if you were a doctor, how would you handle it?—Doc.

DEAR DOC: I would ask the man to ask his wife. How do you handle it?

DEAR ABBY: For 12 years my husband was bald. This last Christmas my daughter and I talked him into buying one of those new hairpeices for men. Thank goodness men are finally waking up to the fact that they too can improve their appearance.

I never knew a head of hair could do so much for anyone. He looks like he did 15 years ago, and he feels 20 years younger. He went on a diet and lost 20 excess pounds, bought a new wardrobe, and most of all, he has new pride in himself, and a new lease on life.

It really has made a big difference in our marriage. Now he takes me out for dinner and dancing when before it was a tug of war.

I just can's say enough for hair!—Happy in L'ville.

DEAR HAPPY: The only thing that can top it is a hat!

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Grandma, Why Is Your Face So Wrinkled?

Why indeed when, with very little effort, and even less expense, you can make those awful wrinkles diminish and come face to face with firmer, younger-looking skin. It's as simple as starting and ending your day with 2nd Debut. This soothing lotion plants precious moisture deeply into your skin, coaxes the lines and wrinkles up and away. In a week, you'll see the years slip away as the wrinkles diminish and lines disappear. 2nd Debut in CEF 600 or 1200 for double strength is at your pharmacy or department store. What have you got to lose but your lines and wrinkles?

Study Claims Use of Pill 'Fully Justified'

LONDON (UPI) — The International Planned Parenthood Federation said Monday it has concluded the continued use of birth control pills is fully justified despite certain risks.

The federation's announcement followed a study by the organization's central medical committee on the pill's side effects.

"The committee feels as result of its deliberations, that the continued use of steroidal contraceptives is an important factor in maternal health — and is fully justified," said the recommendation, published in the IPPF medical bulletin.

The organization also endorsed recent British findings that low-hormone pills are safer. The British committee on drug safety stated that birth control pills containing a estrogen dosage of 50 micrograms have fewer side efects than those with a higher hormone content.

However, the federation said that doses above the recommended 50 micrograms may at times be necessary.

"Any innovation in medicine carries with it certain risks which are by their nature unpredictable, but the possible risks must be weighed against the probable benefits."

The organization issued these words of caution:

● Women with a history of heart disease or blood trouble should avoid using the pill if alternate birth control methods are available.

● It is too early to tell if there is a relationship between the pill and cancer. While research is being conducted, the committee recommends use of the pill.

● Use of the pill during breast-feeding produces an adverse change in the quantity and quality of milk.

● Rare cases of hypertension have been reported while using the pill and changes in both mood and libido have been noted. In such cases, the committee recommended use of an alternate method.

The committee said it found no evidence to suggest the pill caused deformities in childbirth and there was "an impression" certain women could increase their fertility by taking the pill.

SEW SIMPLE

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I want to start my summer sewing but with the big news of the longer skirts coming back, I'm afraid to make any more dresses with short skirts as I can't afford to spend the money to sew and then not wear my clothes. You have such a sensible approach to fashion and home sewing, I would love to have your advice on this matter. Mrs. W.K.L.

Dear Mrs. W.K.L.:

I can only give you my honest opinion which has been backed personally by several top designers I have talked to personally. Yes, of course they are coming back — but they won't be for everyone, they will simply be another new look.

Ask yourself this question: "Did you really ever wear a mini skirt 8 inches above your knees the way they were designed to be worn and did you ever wear a maxi coat for daytime wear?" If you have answered with a negative, the chances are that you won't wear the exaggerated midi length.

ICELAND VOLCANO PROMPTS EVACUATION

REYKJAVIK (AP) — Mount Helka, a volcano in southern Iceland, erupted Tuesday night and inhabitants hastily began evacuating nearby areas.

Two or more lava streams poured down the sides of the 4,747-foot mountain.

Ashes and debris rained on farms over a wide area.

B.C. Could Use Aid In Geriatric Care

By ELIZABETH FORBES

The other day a young friend of mine came up with a pertinent question that bears consideration. We'd been talking of problems and needs in connection with various stages of care for the aged in this area.

Forbes

When suddenly she wondered aloud how long it might be before British Columbia would need to ask the other provinces to chip in something for geriatric care.

This young friend had some logical arguments to back up her question.

"We have the climate and the conditions out here that appeal to older people," she contended. "Immediately they retire, they want to pull up stakes and head for Victoria, Vancouver or a surrounding area."

They come from every one of the other nine provinces "where they have lived their active years, made their money and paid their taxes."

Then, in the twilight of their lives "they arrive in British Columbia, with their varying degrees of savings, ready to enjoy our climate and our other amenities."

Eventually, they reach a day when they must be cared for. One or other of a husband and wife team goes into private hospital or a nursing home. Sometimes both must have such care.

In time "sometimes a very short time" their savings are depleted and "we must pay to keep them comfortable."

This young woman made it clear she doesn't begrudge money being spent in this way. "These elderly people have given much to Canada and they deserve to be cared for in the best possible way."

What she does wonder however is, with retired people coming to the Pacific Coast in increasing numbers, how long we can afford to underwrite the rest of Canada in this regard.

Is the time coming, she asked me again, when British Columbia will need to suggest to the other provinces that while we do not mind having their aged in our midst, some sort of adjustment would be welcome, if they are to be cared for properly.

What do you think?

Last Sunday, an enticing voice on the telephone said "it's picnic weather . . . let's take our supper out to the beach." And astounding but true, that is exactly what we did.

We loaded the car with folding chairs, a folding table, rugs and blankets. We wore slacks and sweaters, warm dresses and suits because, as the voice on the telephone suggested "it could be a bit cold by the water."

Then we headed for Patricia Bay. "It faces west and the sun will shine there much longer than in many other places."

The drive out the West Saanich Road was one to remember. Dogwoods with their showers of white bloom, maple trees in the first spate of new green and arbutus showing waxen clusters of flowers, all added to the beauty of a perfect day.

We established a picnic spot under the spreading boughs of an arbutus, midway along the beach. The sun shone. The bay was calm. The place was ours except for a father and two children off a little to our left.

It wasn't long until we were shedding sweaters and jackets. We didn't need the rugs. Indeed we would have been better in bathing suits and shorts.

Time slipped by in lazy contentment. We enjoyed our supper, watched a heron work for his food. And finally, with the sun still warm on our faces as it descended toward the hills, packed our duffle again and headed back to Victoria.

Everyone was pink skinned and boasting a first sunburn of the year.

This, let me remind you, on the third day of May, in the last month of spring.

Weight Loser Wants to Be Star of Club

OTTAWA (CP) — Maude Hutchison is determined to go to the next calorie-counters convention as a star—a 135-pound one.

Viewed from her experience in the last year, her chances are good.

Recently she won the crown as national calorie queen at the Canadian Coast-to-Coast Calorie Counters convention in Hamilton. She had lost 101 pounds in a year.

It wasn't easy winning the competition against the 4,500 other members of the organization. Losing the weight wasn't easy either.

Miss Hutchison, who came to Ottawa from Halifax seven years ago, says she started to gain weight as a teen-ager.

"Actually I was a very small child," she said in an interview. "I had a very happy childhood and I can't think of any problems that might have caused me to eat as I did."

In January, 1969, at the age of 26, she realized something had to be done. She weighed 313 pounds and hadn't been feeling well for four or five years.

WEIGHT MELTED OFF

"I was afraid to go to a doctor. Then one day I looked at myself in the mirror and said 'Ugh' — I'd had enough.

"Then I started looking around for a club I could join where there were other people with the same problem. I joined the Wispy Willows at the end of January, and at that time I wore a size 54. Now I'm down to a 22½."

Miss Hutchison says she has lost four feet in her total measurements. Inches melted off her hips, arms, thighs and neck.

She saw a doctor and he advised her to stick to a diet of between 800 and 1,200 calories a day. She finds she can lose best when she maintains her calorie intake at 900.

Her diet now consists mainly of high-protein foods such as eggs, meat and fish, with plenty of fresh vegetables and fruits. She also exercises.

Cow Earns Certificate

Warwick Wrija Ann's Jessie, a Jersey cow owned by J. A. Wright of Saanichton, has been awarded a Ton of Gold Certificate by the Canadian Jersey Cattle Club.

Jessie won the award after producing 2,583 pounds of butterfat in 1,461 days. In order to qualify for this award, a cow must produce 2,000 pounds of butterfat in four years.

Demerit System 'Unconstitutional'

CALGARY (CP) — Lawyer William Wuttunee challenged the Alberta driver-demerit system Tuesday as unconstitutional in that it calls for automatic suspension of a driver's licence without a hearing.

He told Magistrate R. V. Read the system violates the basic right of an individual to defend himself. After a driver collects 15 demerit points, a hearing should be held, then a decision made on whether the licence should be suspended.

Wuttunee was appearing for Betty Coldbeck of Calgary who is charged with speeding. The case was remanded to May 22.

Under the demerit system introduced April 1 a driver's licence is suspended when 15 demerit points are collected. The licence has seven points against it when restored and if a driver reaches 15 points again within a year the licence is suspended for three months.

If a driver collects 15 points three or more times in a two-year period the suspension is for six months.

Points ranged from two for failing to signal to seven for leaving the scene of an accident.

Unity Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — A brief advocating one municipal government for Greater Winnipeg was made public Tuesday. The report proposed that the present Metropolitan Winnipeg council be doubled to 20 members as a transitional measure.

Warm Days Needed

WINNIPEG (CP) —One or two weeks of warm, dry weather will be required in most areas of Manitoba before ground will be suitable for seeding, the Manitoba department of agriculture reports.

The department said in its first crop report of the year that field operations have started in just a few isolated areas but most land is too wet to work.

Excessive moisture conditions exist in areas of Gretna, Emerson, Carman and Gladstone.

Search Protested

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta Wilderness Association has launched a protest against a search for coal that it claims poses a threat to a scenic section of mountains 50 miles southwest of here. President Floyd Stromstedt said Tuesday that Alberta Coal Ltd. is working in the Highwood Pass area, "one place our association is not prepared to sacrifice."

Shipment High

WINNIPEG (CP) — Shipments of Prairie grain through West Coast ports in April reached 27,696,000 bushels, the second highest total on record. The highest was in March, 1966, when 28,350,000 bushels were moved.

Bus Service To Long Beach Going Daily

TOFINO — A second bus has been brought into service to handle increasing traffic between Port Alberni and the Long Beach area on the Island's west coast.

Lou Fox, proprietor of the Orient Stage, also said buses will operate daily to west coast points during the summer months.

At present, buses leave Port Alberni three times each week, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 2 p.m.

B.C. ROUNDUP

Man Jailed for Contempt of Court

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fred Shpikula, 22, of Vancouver Tuesday was sentenced to six months for contempt of court during attempts to try him on charges laid following a Maoist demonstration here last Dec. 30.

Shpikula was put in handcuffs and leg irons for a second court appearance Monday after he kicked and fought with police and court officers while resisting removal from the courtroom.

He was cited for contempt after denouncing Judge Graham Darling as "lackey."

The judge issued a formal warning, but Shpikula continued:

"This impartiality you speak of is completely bogus ... I denounce the lackey courts; I denounce you, lackey judge. This is a political trial.

Judge Darling Tuesday also declared a mistrial and ordered Shpikula to appear before the spring assizes of the British Columbia Supreme Court which open next Monday.

Shpikula was charged with mischief, obstructing a police officer and three counts of common assault after a group of Maoists tried to hand out literature in a downtown cafeteria.

Transformer Fails

SMITHERS (CP) — A transformer failure Tuesday left a large rural area north of here without electrical service. Trucks equipped with portable power units moved onto the farms to supply emergency power for milking machines.

Death Accidental

BURNABY (CP) — Coroner's jury Tuesday ruled accidental the death of Alberto Marcinato, 39, a construction worker who was electrocuted April 27 when the nozzle of a pressurized cement-pouring device touched a high-voltage line. The jury recommended that safety regulations be more strongly enforced by construction companies.

Smallwood Groping for Solution To Spreading Strike Threats

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The provincial government, faced with spreading strike threats, today went into a closed huddle to try to find a solution to the growing dilemma.

Part of the problem is a $100-a-month increase granted the Newfoundland Constabulary—the provincial police force—city firemen and provincial prison guards last week.

The settlement has whet the appetites of other provincial employees while at the same time placed the government in a position of being short of funds to grant further extensive increases.

Nevertheless, labor difficulties facing the government include:

—Laboratory technologists in all Newfoundland hospitals plan to walk out Thursday if the government does not grant wage demands today.

—Non-professional hospital workers in Corner Brook, Grand Falls and Twillingate—all members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees—decided earlier to strike Friday.

—The Newfoundland Government Employees Association, which represents more than 9,000 of the province's 13,000 government-paid workers including non-professional staff of other hospitals, expected to complete a secret ballot May 31 on acceptance of a $35-a-month across-the-board offer.

—Workers at the Hospital for Mental and Nervous Diseases in St. John's vote May 11 on a government offer of $50 monthly.

WANT WAGE HIKE.

The non-professional hospital workers are demanding implementation of a year-old conciliation board recommendation for a $30 monthly increase plus a 3½ per cent cost of living allowance retroactive to April 1, 1969. Their salaries now range from $1,700 for laundry workers to $4,600 for admitting officers.

They have rejected the government's offer of $35 a month.

The 300 laboratory workers, members of the Newfoundland branch of the Canadian Society of Laboratory Technologists, want a 10 per cent increase in salaries which average about $650 a month.

An amount of $4,700,000 originally set aside in the 1970 budget for salary increases was raised to $6,000,000 by the cabinet last week as civil service unrest grew. The government also agreed to postpone a widely-condemned job reclassification program for one year.

Premier Joseph Smallwood told NGEA representatives no more money was available and that what was left from the increase given police, firemen and guards would have to be divided among other government employees.

George Lawrence, NGEA president, said Tuesday dissatisfaction had been heightened by the "preferential treatment" given the three forces.

It was not known if the government planned legal action to prevent the strike by non-professional workers.

Present legislation forbids strikes but the budget speech said it would be repealed in favor of non-binding arbitration and a system of continuous negotiation with all government employees.

Health Panel Meets Thursday

As part of Mental Health Week, the Canadian Mental Health Association is sponsoring a panel discussion on pre-school children Thursday at 8:15 p.m. in the Lutheran Church of The Cross, Cedar Hill and Cedar Hill Crossroad.

The Times Monday erroneously reported that the meeting would be in White Cross House.

Dr. J. T. Wood of the Saanich Mental Health Centre, and Dr. Larry Axmaker of the Greater Victoria School Board will take part.

Wallace Faces Runoff

By The Canadian Press

George C. Wallace and Gov. Albert Brewer fought to a standoff in Alabama's Democratic primary for governor, while in Ohio Representative Robert A. Taft rallied to defeat Gov. James A. Rhodes for the Republican Senate nomination.

Taft, scion of a famous political family, will oppose Democrat Howard Metzenbaum, who defeated John Glenn, the former astronaut.

Neither Wallace, a former governor, nor Brewer were able to poll 50 per cent of the vote as required by state law for election. They will meet in a runoff primary June 3.

Primaries in the United States are part of the electoral system in which voters pick their candidates for election.

ASSURED OF OFFICE

The winner in the primary is assured of the governorship since he will be unopposed in the Nov. 3 general election. The Republicans have no candidate.

These were the Tuesday returns:

Alabama, with 2,950 of 4,353 ballot boxes counted, gave Wallace 295,909 votes, Brewer 294,713.

Charles Woods, a millionaire, ran third. He had 106,468 votes, and that alone was enough to force the runoff.

Ohio, with all 13,247 voting units reporting, gave Taft 467,866 votes to 464,701 for Rhodes. Metzenbaum received 427,294 votes to 414,848 for Glenn.

John J. Gilligan, a former congressman, won the Democratic nomination for governor. He will run against Republican Roger Cloud, the state auditor.

The Senate seat now is held by Democrat Stephen M. Young, who is retiring. It looms as a vital one to Republicans hoping against increasing odds to capture the seven more seats needed to take control of the senate.

FAVORED BY ODDS

Tuesday's close race in Alabama made it hard to predict the eventual outcome—but the leader in the opening primary invariably has won Alabama runoffs.

That route took Wallace to his election as governor eight years ago. After serving the one term limit, he passed the governorship on to his late wife, Lurleen, who won overwhelming election.

Brewer was then lieutenant-governor and a Wallace protege. He assumed the governorship when Mrs. Wallace died of cancer, two year ago.

Brewer drew heavy support from voters in predominantly black precincts. Black registration increased 60 per cent since 1966 under a federal law and Negroes now account for 20 per cent of the state's potential voters.

Noggins And Numbers

EDMONTON (CP) — In Alberta, the telephone book contains a lot more than just phone numbers.

Ever wonder how many noggins in a pint?

Or how big is a pinch?

You can find the answers to these questions in the Alberta Government Telephones directory. There are four noggins in a pint and pinches come nine to the teaspoonful. This information comes on a full page of ready reference tables and information.

As well, there is a page of information on "survival in a nuclear war" and another on "postal information."

And that's not all. Scattered through the Yellow Pages are helpful household hints, such as one advising that an old dish mop, lightly oiled, makes a handy labor-saving duster for coiled bedsprings.

"It's a public service," said a spokesman for AGT. The Emergency Measures Organization pays production costs for the nuclear survival ad. The others, including the helpful hints, are supplied by the telephone company.

37 BANDS, 20 FLOATS

And the Parade Is Only One Thing

By GINNY GALT

Everyone loves a parade.

And according to Greater Victoria Celebrations Association secretary Ruby Jessop, this year's Victoria Day parade May 18 will be the best one yet.

The parade's theme is Salute to the Orient, partly because of Expo 70 in Japan. The floats carrying out the oriental theme are particularly beautiful, Mrs. Jessop said.

Twenty major floats will be mixed in with 37 bands, clowns, horses, official cars, and all sorts of other goodies. Officials feel there will be a far better balance between bands and floats this year than in any other year.

The parade will start at 10 a.m. at Mayfair Centre. From there it will proceed down Douglas to Belleville where it will disperse. The whole thing will take about three hours to pass any one spot.

But the parade is just one of the events on the crowded Victoria Day Weekend schedule.

Saturday's festivities start at noon with the Belmont Park Mayday celebration. There will be several band concerts during the day and square dances during the evening. A special sunset ceremony will be held in Centennial Square at 7 p.m., and Miss Victoria will be crowned at the Jaycee Fair in Memorial Arena at 8 p.m.

Sunday is band day. There will be 15 band concerts in various places during the day and a Festival of Bands starting at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Arena. There will also be a horse show and baton competition in the morning.

The 33rd annual Victoria Highland Games will be held during the affernoon at Royal Athletic Park with the Western North American Championships in piping and dancing.

The action starts early Monday with a carillon concert at 9 a.m. in Heritage Court. Then there's the parade, and an open horse show, both at 10 a.m.

For the racing buffs, there will be car and motorcycle races during the day. Weekend will end on a musical note with the Orange Coast College Choral group at McPherson Playhouse.

2 new ways to serve Thrifty Chicken.

FRIED, BROILED, BAKED in caserole or stew . . . chicken makes a nutritious filling meal for very little money.

Spicy Glazed Chicken 'n' Fruit

- 3 whole chicken breasts, split
- cooking oil.
- 1 teaspoon salt.
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper.
- 1 can (14 ounces) Hunt's Peach Halves or Apricots.
- 1 can (7½ ounces) Hunt's Tomato Sauce with Mushrooms.
- ½ teaspoon ground cinnamon or nutmeg.
- 1 teaspoon whole cloves.

Brush chicken with cooking oil; sprinkle with salt and pepper. Arrange, skin-side up, in 13x9x2 inch baking pan. Bake at 375° for 20 minutes. Meanwhile, drain syrup from fruit into saucepan; stir in Hunt's sauce and cinnamon; simmer five minutes. Turn chicken; pour on half of sauce. Bake at 375° for 20 minutes more. Turn chicken; pour on remaining sauce. Stud fruit with cloves and arrange around chicken. Bake 10 to 15 minutes more, basting occasionally, until fruit is thoroughly heated. Makes 6 servings.

DRUMSTICKS Italian Style

- 6 chicken drumsticks.
- 6 chicken thighs.
- ¼ cup cooking oil.
- Salt and pepper.
- 1 onion, sliced.
- 1 bay leaf.
- ½ teaspoon oregano
- 1 can (5½ ounces) Hunt's Tomato Paste.
- 1 cup water.
- 1 cup macaroni, cooked and drained.

In skillet brown chicken in cooking oil; pour off fat. Sprinkle with salt and pepper; add onion, bay leaf and oregano. Mix Hunt's Tomato Paste, water and ½ teaspoon salt. Pour over chicken; simmer, covered, 30 minutes; remove bay leaf. Stir in macaroni and cook 10 minutes more. Makes 6 servings.

Writing Easy in Grade One Using 44-Letter Alphabet

By BOB MITCHELL

At Macaulay elementary recently Mrs. Isobel Cowx asked her grade one class to write what they would like to be when they grow up.

William wrote: "When I grow up I would like to be a goalie for the Los Angeles Kings because it is the only way they'll win and get the Stanley Cup."

And Greg wrote: "When I grow up I would like to be a butcher because they get a lot of exercise and they get to cut meat and I think it is fun."

Nothing unusual about these children's aspirations. What is amazing is that Grade 1 pupils should be capable of putting such complex thoughts into writing.

It should be pointed out William and Greg's sentences were not written in the familiar 26-letter English alphabet, but in the simplified initial teaching alphabet (i.t.a.).

The initial teaching alphabet consists of 44 letters, each representing a sound in the English languarge. It was invented by Sir James Pitman, grandson of the inventor of Pitman shorthand.

In 1961 i.t.a. was introduced into British primary schools on an experimental basis, and this year one school in five is using it to teach children the first steps of reading and writing.

In 1965 the Vancouver school board introduced it on a trial basis in five classes. This year 83 first grade classes are using it.

I.t.a. is also being tried out in some Victoria-area schools, but the number is so low parents with elementary-age children shouldn't be concerned if they have never heard of the device.

In the Greater Victoria district Mrs. Cowx at Macaulay and Msr. Gerry Forbes at Sir James Douglas have been teaching i.t.a. for three years.

In the Sooke district Mrs. Marnie Hamilton teaches a Grade 1 class at Sangster elementary. Mrs. Norma Peterson teaches i.t.a. to a remedial reading class at Glen Lake. And at John Stubbs elementary i.t.a. is taught to pre-schoolers by kindergarten teachers Mrs. Pat Hewitt and Mrs. Helen Fisher.

Teachers if i.t.a. are its strongest boosters. Most of them say they would not like to return to teaching reading and writing via the conventional alphabet.

'They Need Me To Win the Stanley Cup'

Dr. John Downing rejected the traditional orthography (t.o.) in much stronger terms in an article he wrote last September for the Sunday Times of London.

"Teachers who continue to teach reading with the conventional English alphabet and spelling can be sure they are making it harder for their pupils to become literate," he wrote.

"They are using a defective instrument which is a serious handicap to young children in their first steps in learning to read and write."

Who is John Downing?

He designed and carried out original research on i.t.a. and is author of a book entitled "Evaluating the initial Teaching Alphabet". From 1960-69 he was director of the reading research unit and senior lecturer in psychology at the University of London Institute of Education.

He also wrote the Downing Readers, a series of 16 books in i.t.a. for primary children and two supplemental readers designed to aid in the transition from i.t.a. to the regular alphabet.

All of which wouldn't mean very much here, except that since January Downing has been professor of education of the University of Victoria.

In February The B.C. Teacher, official publication of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, ran an article entitled "i.t.a. revisited" by two UBC education professors.

The article was a review of research on i.t.a., and the overall effect was to put down the last decade of experimentation with the new alphabet.

Downing immediately wrote a reply to the UBC professors, and his article, "British and B.C. Teachers Agree — i.t.a. is Better," was published in the B.C. Teacher's April issue.

The article summarizes the most recent and perhaps most definitive study to date comparing i.t.a. to the traditional orthography.

The study — commissioned by the British government — was completed last summer by Prof. Frank Warburton and Vera Southgate of Manchester University's School of Education.

Their conclusions were so favorable to i.t.a. that last December British Education Minister Alice Bacon took the unprecedented step of giving i.t.a. her ministry's full endorsation, which could lead to implementation throughout the country.

Southgate, whose task was to interview teachers, head-teachers, inspectors and advisors learned that "usually children who learned to read by i.t.a. both want to, and do, spend more time on reading than children taught by T.O.

"This conclusion refers to all ages and all intelligence levels of children, and covers lesson times, free times, break times and time at home."

Downing says in his article that when i.t.a. pupils were tested at the end of one year, they were able to read more than twice as much printed in i.t.a. as the T.O. control group could read of the same material printed in T.O.

One common criticism of i.t.a. has been that by the end of the three or four years children who learn to read via the conventional alphabet reach the same level of attainment as i.t.a. children.

But, as Downing points out, i.t.a. was never intended to improve reading at later stages — its purpose is to make reading easier in the first year of school. He quoted from Southgate in the report:

"The aim was to simplify the initial task of learning. Thus, even if i.t.a. chidren are only at the same level of attainment as T.O. children after three or four years, if learning to read has been easier and more pleasant for them, if fewer children have experienced frustrations and failures and if many have known the enjoyment and value of reading a year or so earlier than they would have done, it can be fairly claimed that its use has been justified."

For teachers of i.t.a. one of the greatest joys is the effect of the writing system on children's creative writing.

In a study three years ago Downing and two other researchers reported i.t.a. pupils wrote 50 per cent more than T.O. pupils, and that the vocabulary of the i.t.a. sample was 45 per cent wider in range.

At Macaulay elementary Mrs. Cowx deplored the fact i.t.a. critics base their skepticism on reading comprehension studies (of questionable value), but tend to ignore evidence of increased writing ability.

By early April the top group in her Grade 1 class has begun the transer from i.t.a. to T.O., with two other groups not far behind. She estimated the reading level of her top group as equivalent to Grade 3 on the regular alphabet.

Downing asked Mrs. Cowx to summarize her experience with i.t.a. and included her comments in the B.C. Teacher article:

Every child learns to read, she said, and no child feels reading is too difficult. They learn to read and write in i.t.a. within four or five months.

Pupils no longer consider the size of a word a barrier to writing it, which means seatwork assignments require less supervision because there are no interruptions to ask how to spell a word.

Mrs. Cowx said pupils write their own thoughts without frustration, concentrate for longer periods of time, do more writing (makes it easier to transfer later from printing to writing), and are able to transfer from i.t.a. to T.O. after reaching a higher than usual reading level.

Cost has been cited as yet another barrier to implementation of i.t.a. But Downing maintains i.t.a. readers and workbooks should not cost more than the T.O. variety schools have been using for years.

In a letter which he wrote earlier this year to the B.C. Teacher — it never got published due to its length — he said:

"As a matter of fact, a school can introduce i.t.a. without buying any i.t.a. books at all. Probably the best method of teaching i.t.a. is in a language experience approach in which the teachers and students make their own books."

Other applications of i.t.a. other than in the regular classroom include remedial reading classes, teaching English as a second language, and treatment of reading disabilities such as dyslexia and dysgraphia.

As a guid for students learning to speak English, Sir James Pitman has devised W.i.t.a. (world initial teaching alphabet), which has the same 44 characters as i.t.a., but makes them larger and darker for stressed syllables and lighter and smaller for unstressed syllables.

The importance of teaching children how to read quickly and with as little failure as possible is underlined by statistics provided by the United States Office of Education.

The number of youngsters helpless before the printed page is staggering: one in four has serious reading deficiencies, one in two jobless youths is functionally illiterate, and two in three youngsters tested recently by the Pentagon were below seventh grade in reading ability.

Last year James E. Allen Jr., U.S. education commissioner, pledged the Nixon administration to a new national goal: assuring every citizen the right to read.

For millions of English-speaking children learning to read becomes complex and frightening when they first confront the conventional alphabet, which is anything but straightforward in its use of symbols.

Take the letter 'i'. There are not only many ways to spell it — as in eye, aye, aisle, height, cry, choir, by, bye, buy. There are also five ways to pronounce it — in, mine, gift, sing, furious, trip.

I.t.a. is now used in about 10 per cent of U.S. elementary schools, according to the I.T.A. Foundation, Hempsted, N.Y.

For John Downing, the most recent research, especially the study done by Southgate and Warburton, is a vindication of his earlier work on i.t.a. The way has been cleared for implementation on a large-scale throughout the English-speaking world.

Writing last fall in the Sunday Times, he said:

"Action is needd. We have to face the fact that every young girl or boy going into infant school and being taught by the normal alphabet unadulterated is at best being given a useless burden and at worst being made to take an unnecessary risk of failure."

New Alphabet Up to Schools —Department

Officially the provincial department of education is neither for or against the initial teaching alphabet.

Assistant superintendent of education John Meridith said Friday as far as his records show the department has never made a public statement about I.T.A. nor has any attempt been made to evaluate it.

"We have not prohibited it, but neither have we encouraged its adoption in individual school districts," Meridith said.

"We do not prescribe its use—it is only part of the total language-arts program.

"You mustn't regard it as a panacea for everything and everyone, as some people obviously do.

"We have not yet made a provincial evaluation of it, so we are not about to recommend it for everyone."

Meridith said a survey of I.T.A. use last year revealed it was being taught in 34 elementary schools in 18 school districts throughout the province.

Meridith was asked if the department of education will undertake an evaluation of I.T.A.

"I suspect it will, not so much to make a judgment about it, but to find out about reading ability."

Canadian Policy Not Set in U.S., Says Ritchie

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Undersecretary A. E. Ritchie, former Canadian ambassador to the U.S. said Tuesday it is not evident to him that Canadian foreign policy is made in Washington.

In an appearance before the Commons external affairs committee, Ritchie also beld that America's big economic stake in Canada gives this country a valuable bargaining lever in dealings with the U.S.

Ritchie said Americans' feeling is that "Canada foreign policy is extremely independent, and that if they tried to make it over they would get nowhere."

Abortions Sought

PARIS (Reuters) — More than 300,000 illegal abortions are carried out in France each year, an organization urging reform of the country's strict abortion laws claimed Monday night. Prof. Raoul Palmer, a specialist on sterility problems, said one woman in 1,000 died because of abortion operations.

Study Planned to Change Original Teaching Alphabet

The man who did the first research on the initial teaching alphabet now plans to begin a study that could lead to changes in I.T.A.

Dr. John Downing, 47, intends to undertake a large experiment involving several Island school districts where I.T.A. is currently in use.

He will attempt to pinpoint some of the psychological processes children use in learning to read and write with I.T.A. as opposed to the traditional orthography.

Results of the experiment could lead to changes in how I.T.A. is taught.

CLOSE LOOK

In a second experiment Downing will take a close look at the 44-letter alphabet itself to see whether improvements can be made. If so, he said, publishers will get the information free so they can implement changes into I.T.A. readers and workbooks.

In a third study Downing and members of the University of Victoria psychology and linguistics departments and faculty of education will attempt to find out how children see language before they begin formal education.

The work could lead to new insight into how to teach reading, Downing said.

He pointed out children do not conceive of language as a series of connected letters and words with all the appropriate punctuation — as adults do—but rather as a continuous flow of sounds.

Downing is also editing a book entitled "Comparative Reading" with contributions from scholars in Russia, France, Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Finalnd, Indian, Nigeria, Israel and Japan.

"Comparative reading" is a new term to describe comparison of the experience of reading in different languages and countries.

Just as psychologists learned much about human personality by comparing child-rearing practices in various cultures, so educators hope to learn more about language and education environments by comparing the ways in which reading is taught.

Downing plans to bring together contributors to the book he is editing to "put up a blueprint for a centre on literacy.

Scout Grant Approved; School Teams Lose Out

Scouts "yes", high school athletes "no."

That was the word Tuesday when the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee studied grants from two organizations.

First on the firing line seeking an out-of-season grant were the Boy Scouts of Canada, Greater Victoria Region, asking $1,197 to outfit 28 Scouts scheduled to head for Scotland and a Jamborette in June.

The funds are to be used for special jackets, packsacks, flags and other assorted "non-budget item" equipment.

The committee agreed to recommend to individual councils that $600 be granted to the group.

Of the 28 Scouts travelling to Scotland 16 are from Greater Victoria; three from Greater Vancouver; four from Powell River; and five from the Penticton-Summerland area.

Mayor Art Young, Esquimalt, and Ald. Leslie Passmore, Saanich, voted against the grant noting that gudgets were already made up for this year.

Within minutes of making its recommendation on the Scouts the committee flatly rejected a request from the Greater Victoria High Schools Athletics group seeking funds to help send a soccer team and a rugby team to Scotland in March, 1971.

Asked what logic there was behind recommending a missed deadline grant while rejecting a request made almost a year in advance chairman Mayor Frances Elford, Oak Bay, answered that "there is no logic.'

She later added that the Scouts "just made a good case, a strong presentation. Maybe the high school students can spend a few months trying to raise funds and then, if they don't make their target come back for another try."

The high school students were not alone on the reject list.

Also turned down or referred back to individual councils were the Navy League, the Maritime Museum, the Art Gallery, amateur basketballers and the North and South Saanich Agricultural Fair.

Only the high school group was asking for money for next year. All others were making their bids, or renewing their bids, after grant granting deadlines.

TUNNARD
. . . at Yale

University To Honor Ex-City Man

A former Victoria student who now heads city planning studies at Yale University will receive an honorary degree at the University of Victoria convocation May 30.

Dr. Christopher Tunnard, was born in Victoria, attended Oak Bay Public School, Oak Bay High School and Victoria College before going to UBC.

He lived in London, England, for eight years before joining the Harvard University graduate school of design.

In 1950 he became director of Yale University's graduate course in city planning. In 1965 he was appointed head of the department of city planning.

Tunnard is author of several books on urban America: "The City of Man," "Man-Made America: Chaos or Control" (winner of the National Book Award, 1964), and "American Skyline."

Uvic Chancellor Roderick Haig-Brown will confer the LLD on Tunnard.

SAANICH COMMITTEE BACKS REPORT

Sharp Assessment Hikes 'Justified'

A change in provincial rules about local assessments in 1968, spiralling land values and attempts to keep pace with this produced sharp assessment increases in Saanich, finance committee said Tuesday night.

The comments were made after receiving a report on sample assessment changes on typical properties from municipal assessor William Craven.

His report was requested after Dr. J. B. MacLean, 2662 Queenswood, wrote the committee last March saying his taxes and assessment have jumped sharply since 1965.

SCHOOL BOARDS

The mill rate set each year by councils and school boards is applied to assessment of land and buildings. The assessment is supposed to be 50 per cent of market value, but rarely is.

Ald. William Noel said he was told by Craven that the "rule of thumb" is to multiply the assessment by three to get market value.

In his report, Craven said the legislature in 1966 amended the Assessment Equalization Act to limit the increase in assessment on land or buildings to no more than 5 per cent in any one year, except where properties underwent a physical change or additions and alterations were made.

"This section was in effect for the 1967-1968 roll and in each year all land was increased by 5 per cent," he said.

In 1968, the legislature amended the act by allowing 5 per cent of the previous year's total assessments to be added to the roll each year. (This lifted the per-property limitation).

"In these past two years, we have applied 5 per cent of the previous year's roll to the land in varying amounts, depending on the area in which the property is located, to bring all assessments in each school district in the municipality to the same percentage of current market value," said Craven.

ASSESSMENT

MacLean's land assessment was $1,925 in 1968 increasing to $4,590 in 1969 (up 138 per cent) and to $5,120 in 1970 (up 11 per cent).

Examples quoted, without descriptions of property, showed one on Queenswood increasing from $5,130 in 1968 to $13,310 in 1970. The first increase was 133 per cent, the second 11 per cent.

Other areas showed a variety of change, generally with a lower percentage increase. Some were higher — a property on West Saanich jumped 150 per cent in 1969 and one on Mountain rose 192 per cent in the same year. But percentage increases the following year were nominal — 9 per cent and 4 per cent.

Ald. Frank Waring said assessments had got behind and had not caught up with land values.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said everyone is unhappy about assessments, because taxes are based on them, until it is time to sell, when the market price exceeds the indicated amount on the assessment.

Finance committee chairman, Ald. Foster Isherwood, said MacLean's case "doesn't seem out of line." The committee agreed to advise him of the review and send him details of Craven's report.

Mormons Denounce Birth Control

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church has denounced attempts to limit population growth and ease restrictions against abortion as "contrary to the revealed instruction of God."

An editorial published in a weekly church supplement published by the Deseret News, which is owned by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Mormon, says:

"It is earnestly to be hoped that Latter-day Saints will not be misled by the ridiculous philosophy now being widely advocated that families are to be limited to one, or at most two, children."

MP Out of Touch —Commissioner

OTTAWA (CP) — A member of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission told Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) Tuesday night he was not communicating with his constituents.

John Shanski of Winnipeg, a part-time member of the commission, made his comment during an appearance of the CRTC before the Commons broadcasting committee.

Mr. Dinsdale said a CRTC announcement in December that banned the wholesale importation by microwave of U.S. TV programs for distribution in Canada by cable discriminated against those living far from the border.

CRTC Chairman Pierre Juneau asked Mr. Dinsdale whether he had read a CRTC announcement in April that said the commission would permit some use of microwave to carry a limited number of U.S. shows to most areas of Canada.

'NOT AWARE'

Mr. Dinsdale said he was not aware of the announcement "in those precise terms."

The CRTC cable proposals will be the subject of a public hearing in June.

The committee later decided to hold another meeting with Mr. Juneau and his officials today.

Mr. Shanski, one of 10 part-time members on the 15-member CRTC, told Mr. Dinsdale he couldn't help "feeling you haven't read our proposals and that you aren't in touch with your constituents."

Mr. Dinsdale said his constituents were upset because they believed the commission had outlawed microwave for importing U.S. TV.

Mr. Dinsdale said Mr. Shanski had a responsibility to make certain the people of Manitoba were informed of CRTC decisions.

Earlier Tuesday, Mr. Juneau told committee members that MPs—not the commission—must accept the responsibility for "the purposes of broadcasting Canada."

He said the CRTC is composed of public servants "just trying to implement the direction decided on by members of Parliament when they passed the Broadcasting Act."

Spy Teams View Viewers

LONDON (AP) — Eight spy teams on wheels are beaming in on Britons who watch television without paying fees. About $18,000,000 a year in delinquencies is at stake.

Coronation Street, a durable soap opera, provides happy hunting for the detection teams. It goes on the air Mondays and Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m., and nearly everybody who watches television has a legal or illegal set on then.

Britain has 16,750,000 television sets. Every one using one is supposed to pay an annual fee to help support the BBC. Only 15,500,000 have paid them. The government wants its money and figures to get it. It can fine a delinquent, but you have to find him first.

The electronic sleuths, operating in trucks with special antennas, trace oscillator frequencies given off by all sets. The radar-type screen inside a truck can pinpoint the location.

FIRE LOSS $250,360

Fires caused $250,360 in damage in Saanich municipality last year.

The bulk of this — $180,000 — was for a single fire, at Van Isle moulding mill on Delmonte last August.

Fire Chief Joseph Sutherland, in his annual report, said this fire was cuased by children playing with matches.

The fire department attended 1,355 alarms. Ambulance and resusitator calls were the highest, 806, followed by grass fires, 127, and buildings, 118. Fifty-five alarms were false.

The 70-man department placed first in Class B municipalities in British Columbia in the National Fire Protection Association fire prevention contest.

Cowichan Festivities

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Indian Band's annual Corpus Christi sports days Saturday and Sunday will start off the Festival of Sports celebrations in the Cowichan Valley.

Fred George, secretary of the Corpus Christi committee, said the full schedule of celebrations will begin with a parade at 10 a.m. Saturday.

"The parade will start at Cliffs Road, Duncan, go through the main street in town and end at the Somenos Reserve park where all events will be held Saturday," he said.

Following at 11 will be the consolation men's soccer game between St. Mary's Mission School, Mission, and the Schemers from Port Alberni.

The championship game between Saanich Braves and the mainland Harrison Chehalis team will be played at 5:30 p.m.

Elimination soccer games between 12 Indian teams were held on the weekend.

Saanich's six to eight-year-olds soccer team will play the Cowichan Indian band's team at 12:30. Track and field events will be held at the reserve park between 1 and 5:30 followed by the men's soccer championship.

QUEEN CONTEST

Eight girls will compete in the Miss Cowichan Queen contest at the Indian dancing festivities at the Somenos Long House Saturday evening.

Eleven-man war canoe races, water sports and the crowning of the new queen by Miss Doreen Wilson, present Miss Cowichan, at Quamichan Lake on Sunday will be the highlights of the last day of the Corpus Christi celebrations. Indian dancing will be featured again at the Somenos Long House that evening. Sunday's events will begin at 1 p.m.

Three Students To Job Hunt For Hundreds

Three University of Victoria students have a plan they hope will deal with large-scale summer unemployment among among degree-seekers.

The three-man Alma Mater Society committee — Rick Calderbank, Dave Inkster and Amrit Manik — plan to tackle the unemployment situation by working in conjunction with the campus Manpower office and by collecting data on summer work for future use.

They are supported by a $3,600 grant from the Uvic administration and Alumni Association. Their office is located next door to the Manpower office.

Manik estimated between three-quarters and four-fifths of the 1,900 students now registered at the Manpower office don't have jobs.

Manik's job is to help the Manpower people co-ordinate local employer needs with the supply of students.

He phones employers to find out if and when they will need extra employees. He also keeps in touch with students who have registered to find out if they're having any luck getting work.

It's the kind of work Manpower just doesn't have personnel to do, said Inkster. The federal agency doesn't get jobs for people, it just refers them, he said.

Manik's position will become more important in June when university Manpower counsellor Heidi Forstbauer, leaves Victoria.

However, Miss Forstbauer says she will be immediately replaced when she leaves. Manpower will also hire summer help to cover staff vacations in July and August, she said.

Calderbank and Inkster, meanwhile are collecting data on the summer work situation.

This week they will start analysing questionnaires filled out by undergraduates, fourth-year students, employers and high school students.

Questionnaire surveys at Uvic and other B.C. universities are being co-ordinated by the B.C. Union of Students' Task Force on Student Unemployment.

While the Uvic committee knows large numbers of Uvic students are still without work, they won't know the dimensions of the problem until they have analysed the returning questionnaires.

The questionnaires to undergrads seek information on what kind of jobs students prefer — what wage they would accept, extent of their search for work, and how much money they will need to return next fall.

SURGEONS ELECT OAK BAY DOCTOR

Dr. John Hough of Oak Bay was elected president of the B.C. Surgical Society at its recent annual meeting in Kamloops.

Presenting one of the scientific papers at the meeting was Dr. Robert Hosie of Saanich.

The society has about 200 members.

Rainbow Cadets Sweep Sports Day

Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadets were the big winners when nine Vancouver Island corps competed in a sports weekend at CFB, Esquimalt.

They won five out of the six trophies, placing top for the Inter-Corps Sports Trophy, Grand Aggregate Trophy and in swimming, .22 rifle shooting and whaler pulling.

The sixth trophy, for tug-o-war, went to the Amphion Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps of Nanaimo.

Also among the 285-strong contingent were cadets from Duncan, Alberni, Port Augusta, Clayoquot and Sidney.

While at Esquimalt the cadets took part in the Battle of the Atlantic Sunday service and held a march-past with Rear-Admiral H. A. Porter, maritime commander Pacific, taking the salute.

Independence Planned

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain will grant independence to the South Pacific island colony of Fiji and its 500,000 people Oct. 10, it was decided Monday. The decision was made by a constitutional conference attended by Lord Shepherd, British foreign and Commonwealth office minister, and the 36 members of the Fiji legislature.

EX-MEDIC'S WIFE SHUNS SHOTS, PILLS

BLACK RIVER FALLS, Wis. (UPI) — Mrs. Jennie White who has just turned 100 says she never had an ache or pain because of certain things she does not do.

"I have never taken an aspirin, never had a shot and I don't intend to," she said.

Mrs. White is the widow of Dr. Arthur E. White, the city's first doctor. He died in 1922.

Firemen on Display Saturday

The big red trucks of the Saanich and Victoria fire departments will be on display Saturday afternoon as both forces hold open house to make "fire service recognition day."

The idea is to help the community to a better understanding of the fire department's role which besides fighting fires includes regular inspections of key institutions and planning firefighting strategy at key points in advance of any outbreak.

In the city, the open house will be at the main station on Yates only and will run from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

Firemen will demonstrate firefighting using foam and show how a fire victim is rescued from a rooftop using stretcher and aerial ladder.

An old car body at the rear of the station will serve to show the department's cutting saws and torches at work. Visitors can tour the station, examine the trucks and ask questions.

Open house at the three Saanich halls will run from 2 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

At the main hall, on Vernon Avenue alongside the municipal hall, there will be demonstrations, including ladder rescue work and a chance to see the department's deluge gun, a device for throwing an extra-long and heavy stream of water from three hoses.

The department's ambulance crew will display its emergency equipment, including new gear which enables it to radio a patient's electrocardiogram ahead to the hospital.

The other two Saanich fire halls are located at 3987 Shelbourne and 5500 Hamsterley.

Plans Sought For Clubhouse

Saanich council will be asked to invite submission of plans from three architectural firms for the start of a new clubhouse at Cedar Hill golf course.

This recommendation from the parks and outdoor recreation committee follows receipt of letters from three architectural firms—John Di Castri, Wagg and Hambleton, and Wade, Stockdill, Armour and Blewett.

"I think they should aim for $25,000 in the first phase," said committee chairman Ald. William Noel.

Location would be on the eastern border of the golf course at Derby Road.

Ald. Frank Waring questioned whether an architect is needed at this stage, and said a clubhouse he saw at Qualicum was built for $16,000. But if it was to be a permanent facility of $75,000, then an architect would be needed.

The present clubhouse, on Finlayson in Victoria city, is in the part of street rebuilding as well as being an old structure.

Cheque Forger Jailed

Douglas Brent Dockter, no fixed address, was sentenced in court Tuesday to six months' definite and one year indeterminate in a youth detention unit for uttering a forged cheque.

Dockter admitted uttering a $640 forged cheque on April 24 in Saanich.

He also pleaded guilty to two charges from Vancouver.

One dealt with an $850 forged cheque and the other with an attempt to obtain $872 through a cheque drawn at a bank where Dockter had no account.

Peter Robert Byrne, 33, of 660 Granderson, was fined $300 after he was found guilty of shoplifting by Judge William Ostler.

He was charged with stealing fishing gear and socks valued at $9.17 from Simpsons-Sears store at Shelbourne.

Kenneth George Thompson, 28, of 2526 Government was committed for trail in higher court following a preliminary hearing on a charge of attempting to utter a forged cheque. Bail was set at $2,500.

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — the Vatican and Nigeria have decided to establish diplomatic relations at ambassadorial level, informed sources said here Tuesday.

DAD HELPS DELIVER TWINS

SHERWOOD PARK, Alta. (CP) — Twins Wendy Patricia and Wanda Leanne were reported well in hospital Tuesday after their father helped deliver them at home.

Mel Froese, a 27-year-old pipe-fitter, was awakened in his home near Edmonton early Saturday morning by his wife who complained of a backache. She was not alarmed since she did not expect to deliver until early June.

Soon afterwards, however, she told her husband she thought she was in the late stages of labor contractions.

"I told Elsie, I'd better take her to the hospital, but she said it was no use; it's too late," Mr. Froese said.

"I was so excited and frightened I ran outside to get my neighbor for help but no one was home. I came back into the house and I had no choice but to stay and help. There wasn't even time to make a phone call because the first one was already born."

Mr. Froese said he did not know what to do. His wife told him to lift the infant and smack it to start it breathing.

"I slapped the baby on the back but my wife said it wasn't hard enough, so she slapped it a few times and it started wailing."

He then ran back outside to get help from a neighbor he knew was a nurse.

"She had just broken her leg and was on crutches so I ran ahead of her back to the house just in time to hear my wife scream."

The nurse, Mrs. Wallace Bentt, arrived to assist the 24-year-old mother with what she thought was the afterbirth.

"All of a sudden I heard Mrs. Bentt cry out: 'Oh my God, it's another one."

The second infant, a breach birth, was blue from lack of oxygen. She had mucous clogging her breathing passages.

"I asked Mrs. Bentt what they would do in a hospital and she told me they would use suction to clear the baby's throat, so I thought of the vacuum cleaner right away and ran to get it and plug it in," said Mr. Froese.

For the next half-hour the frantic father and Mrs. Bentt struggled to keep the tiny infant alive using the vacuum cleaner.

"The baby would breath for a few minutes and then stop again, ao we had to keep it up for about a half an hour and finally her color seemed normal and she kept breathing," the father said.

Wendy weighed four pounds 10 ounces and Wanda five pounds three ounces.

DISTINCTIVE NAME FOUND FOR 'XERX'

LONDON (UPI) — London cab driver Alan Matten, 26, and his wife Eileen, 24, wanted a name that would be a bit different for their son. They decided on Xerxes Xavier Zeus Zachery Silas Thaddeus. They'll call him Xerx for short.

DUTCH GRATITUDE to the part Canadian troops played in their country's liberation 25 years ago was marked Tuesday when about 500 persons of Dutch descent gathered at the Victoria Cenotaph in memory of May 5, 1945, Taking part in the ceremony were the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and the Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's) Regiment. A bed of 2,000 red tulips in Beacon Hill Park was officially presented to the city.

Victoria Wrenettes Receive Promotions

Several Wrenettes received promotions when the Patricia Dufour Navy League Wrenette Corps held open house to mark Navy League Week.

A large number of parents and other guests were on hand to see leading wrenette badges presented to Shannon Akins and Sharon Micks, and able wrenette badges to Wanda Allan, Lynn Beazley, Cheryl Drover, Leslie Quin, Donna Sims and Lynda Turnbull.

Sub.-Lt. Wendy Anderson was given her Navy League warrant.

The presentations were made by deputy national chairman for wrenettes, Mrs. George Dufour.

Guests were given a tour of the classes, which include home nursing, boatwork, sailing, communications, gunnery and musketry.

It was announced that the annual inspection will be held Wednesday, June 3 at 7 p.m. at Navy League headquarters on Robert Street.

Home Recipe Plan Takes Off Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

LABOR FLAYS OTTAWA POLICIES

Recession 'Will Last at Least a Year'

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government has plunged Canada into an economic recession that the country won't escape for at least a year, Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said Tuesday night.

"Even if the government started moderating their fiscal policies now, the recession is set full course and will run for a year," he said in an interview.

He said the government's "psychotic obsession with fighting inflation" has created pockets of high unemployment across the country that can only be expected to worsen.

SEES 'REAL TROUBLE'

The result will be a fall and winter of unusual labor unrest as railroad employees, woodworkers and autoworkers start major bargaining rounds with employers who have been asked to resist wage increases.

"About 900,000 of the CLC's 1,500,000 members have contracts coming up this year," Mr. MacDonald said. "There is going to be real trouble before the end of the year."

He said that in all his experience as a labor leader he has never seen such labor solidarity as has arisen in recent months in support of the CLC's opposition to the federal government's call for voluntary wage restraints.

Earlier, in a speech to the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, Mr. MacDonald said both industry and the labor movement are guilty of discriminating on the basis of race, religion and nationality against workers seeking jobs.

He warned that in periods of recession and economic insecurity, discrimination against minorities tends to grow as native-born Canadians try to protect jobs for their own kind.

WATER ACT TEETH PULLED

OTTAWA (CP) — Three Liberal MPs mutinied in the Commons resources committee Tuesday and temporarily kicked what Resources Minister J. J. Greene called "the teeth" out of the government's proposed Canada Water Act.

Lawyer-MPs Hyliard Chappell (L—Peel South) and Walter Deakon (L—Toronto High Park) led the rebellion, maintaining that a government amendment to the anti-pollution bill was badly drafted.

The amendment called for fines of $5,000 a day for manufacturers and importers violating anti-pollutant content regulations for cleaning agents and water conditioners and seizure of such proscribed products.

Mr. Chappell asked Mr. Greene to withdraw the amendment and have it redrafted so it clearly indicates what penalties would be imposed rather than have it refer to the Hazardous Products Act for clarification.

Mr. Greene refused and Mr. Chappell moved that a section of the amendment be deleted.

The motion passed 7-5, with H. R. Hymmen (L—Kitchener) also joining four opposition members in opposing the minister.

Mr. Greene, obviously nettled, told the members they had "taken the teeth out of the bill."

He said following the meeting, however, that the section would probably be re-introduced either in committee or when the bill is taken back to the Commons for third reading.

LAKE COWICHAN

Mill Rate Cut But Taxes Same

LAKE COWICHAN — Lake Cowichan taxes have dropped one milli from 1969.

W. A. Chappell, village clerk, said the mill rate for 1969 was 56.91 and 1970 is 53.02.

The changes in tax rates are: general rate, down from 24 mills to 23; school, decreased from 30.09 mills to 28.05; hospital, cut from 2.01 mills to 1.97.

Chappell said that taxes will remain about the same due to the increased land assessment under the new government formula.

"On the average home no one will pay over $50 this year," he said.

Budget for 1970 is $278,051 and 1969's was $264,191.

Flight to Start Duncan-Vancouver

DUNCAN—A regular float plane and freight service from Quamichan Lake, Duncan, to downtown Vancouver will start Monday.

Duncan manager-pilot for Air West Airlines Ltd. Roy Teasdale said the service will begin initially with three incoming and two outgoing flights daily of a pilot and seven-passenger Beaver aircraft.

30 MINUTES

Teasdale, former Duncan Flying Club president, said the service will form part of an existing Victoria-Vancouver schedule, but if business is as anticipated then the Beaver aircraft will be based at Duncan.

Estimated flying time between Quamicahn Lake to downtown Vancouver by the float plane service is 30 minutes.

Fare for passenters one-way is $12.90. Freight may be carried at $3.50 for each 60 pounds.

This Man Doesn't Whistle Anymore Now That He's Aware of Dying Air

By ED GOULD

MAPLE BAY — They used to say that if you followed the cheerful whistling, you'd eventually find Kurt Horn working around his Bird's Eye Cove marina.

Horn doesn't whistle so cheerily anymore; he's too worried about the threat to life by pollution of the environment and often paces the floor at night wondering if there'll be any future for his three daughters, now aged four, seven and 10.

"I hope I never live to see them choking to death because of a lack of fresh air to breathe," Horn said in an interview. "I'm not being dramatic. The facts are indisputable. If we continue to pollute at our present rate, our children will never reach maturity and it's something that every parent better be prepared to face."

Horn, who is Winnipeg-born and 37, is not the picture of the average cynic. He is not even the fanatic that some people think he is. A blond, blue-eyed, lean six-footer with the build of a professional boxer, (he's been dubbed the Golden Viking by one local newsman and the name stuck) he has a delightful sense of humor and a well-developed awareness of human foibles — his own as well as those of others.

But he's deadly serious about his war against the approaching death of the planet which U Thant says will await us all in less than 20 years.

He was personally alerted to the UN secretary-general's statement when it was published and elaborated upon in claimed the chemicals caused fetal deformities.

Horn Is Even Selling His Marina

With the backing of the membership, Horn has dictated dozens of letters — some praising, others damning — federal and provincial governments for their stands on particular pollution matters.

SPEC members distributed copies of information on polluting qualities of detergents and their individual phosphate contents after picketing stores and urging customers to buy those that are biodegradable and contain as little phosphates as possible.

When Vancouver art gallery owner Douglas Christmas announced plans to shower tiny Miami Island off Thetis Island with tons of green glass to create a "shimmering work of art," SPEC's Horn

A wealth of material, including sealed cannisters of chip samples, filmed reports of chip accumulation and expert advisers, have been offered to the department if it wants to make a charge laid under Section 33 of the Fisheries Act stick.

Despite the almost-daily attacks on Crofton Pulp and Paper Limited which darkens the sun with its plumes of sulphurous smoke and dumps 50,000,000 gallons of effluent into Stuart Channel, Horn's greatest fear now is the prospect of a nuclear power plant which B.C. Hydro plans for Vancouver Island.

Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum admitted water temperature might be raised four degrees but "might actually aid fish propagation."

Horn challenged Shrum to send an expert on nuclear power units to debate the issue in public but he turned down an invitation by Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce to "help inform the public so it can make up its own mind" about the positive and negative aspects of nuclear power generation.

"What really bugs me as much as anything is the common guy in the street who really believes that more industry here would be a benefit to him personally."

He trots out an impressive report which indicates that increased industry inevitably means higher taxes, overcrowded schools, recreation facilities and every community service.

"And that means more pollution."

He thinks Vancouver Island should remain a recreation area "so why bring in more pulp mills to stink it up any more than they already are?"

Horn's outspoken attitude which sometimes borders on belligerence has gained him critics as well as some praise. There were those who objected to his UTAH YANKEES GO HOME signs at the legislature protest although Horn said he was not necessarily anti-American, "just anti-Utah."

The most insidious critics have discounted everything Horn does because he owns a marina and therefore has a vested interest in anti-pollution.

He's grown so fed up with that jibe that last week he announced that he is selling his 100 boat marina operation, possibly the most popular and profitable in the area, and will devote his full-time efforts to working for SPEC.

It won't be a paid position. His efforts to date have been totally voluntary and members at a recent meeting had to force him to take even travelling expenses from the $1,100 treasury.

As well as a lot of time, effort, research and sleep, the marina owner has had to pay extra help to look after his business while he's in Port Hardy, Salt Spring Island, Nanaimo or Vancouver on SPEC business.

He finds excuses by local doctors "who know more than anyone about the effects of air pollution on the respiratory system" pretty flimsy when they claim they are too busy to work for SPEC.

"There's an excuse for almost everything. But I know from the calls I get day and night that there's a growing concern for what SPEC is doing.

"Personally, I don't give a damn any more what people think about me. All I know is that I am not going to roll over and die without putting up one hell of a fight first."

He's the Angry President Of the Toughest SPEC Group

a February, 1969, issue of the Bank of Montreal newsletter and brought home even further with the visit to Duncan by Dr. Jack Kent of Northshore Unitarian church in North Vancouver.

Kent urged Duncan area residents to form a chapter of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control and Horn said he got involved "when I woke up and saw man's stupidities. Now I'm fighting back, for SPEC."

Since Cowichan - Malahat SPEC chapter was formed last year and Horn was elected president, its activities have been in several headline stories and on national radio and television. Almost daily there are references to the group in the Victoria and Nanaimo dailies and in weeklies throughout the Cowichan Valley.

Close to 300 family and separate memberships have been sold and meetings held each month attract large crowds. Together with an active vice-president (marine biologist Jim Egan of Thetis Island) and a hard-working executive, the group keeps the pressure on against the polluters.

It was the first SPEC chapter (there are 35 in B.C. at present) to organize pickup depots for pesticides and herbicides containing DDT and other chemicals that do not return to nature.

Fifty members of SPEC, most of them from Cowichan-Malahat, picketed the Legislative Buildings in Victoria about Utah Mining Company's permit application to dump 9.3 million gallons of effluent daily into Rupert Inlet, a fishing area reputedly worth $2,000,000 ayear.

The members swooped down on B.C. Hydro's Duncan depot to protest the use of 2, 4, D and 2,4,5,T used in a to control brush growth along power rights-of-way.

Horn pointed out to a press conference held in front of Hydro officials that the chemicals were used by United States troops to kill crops and defoliate jungle in Viet Nam. He quoted several respected authorities who and Egan went on hotline radio and made the front page of the Times with their protests.

Minister of Lands and Forests Ray Williston withdrew Christmas's permit

Meanwhile, Utah Mining Company continues to construct its mine facilities and it is still uncertain what steps the federal fisheries department will take to ensure that the enclosed inlet will not become the "giant pudding" ecologists say it will when the high-solid-content effluent is dumped into it.

"Fisheries Minister Jack Davis says it's harmless to fish," Horn said, raising his eyebrows and throwing his hands in the air. "The company admits their effluent will contain residual quantities of cyanide, zinc and other reagents and after a superficial test on coho fingerlings they come up with a statement like that."

The department is supposed to be engaged in further fish tests but Horn says, "What about the crabs, oysters, clams and shrimps? That's a whole ecological area that should be studied, not just a fish pond."

He believes the local SPEC group "through yelling out loud rather than breathing hard," helped make the fisheries department take whatever action it has.

He denies he is looking for any personal glory but notes with satisfaction that MacMillan Bloedel at Chemainus are building a settling pond after many SPEC complaints about herring fry kills in the area of the company's loading docks.

If Horn has any particular bete-noire it is the fisheries departments, federal and provincial, which are "gutless," and their "toothless" legislation.

Rather than wait any longer, he has given an ultimatum to the federal fisheries department in Nanaimo to proceed legally against Crofton Pulp and Paper Limited and its continued pollution of the sea bed by chip spillage, or he will take the action himself.

HOME GARDEN

Divide Roots After Flowering

By HILDA BEASTALL

The first of the cultivated daisy-type perennials to bloom here is doronicum, whose golden yellow flowers were hastened into April this year. When a plant or two is well established, a succession of flowers will continue to the end of May. They are fine for cutting, for their long stems give height to flower groups of heavier blossoms.

Hilda

The leaves are a good solid rich green, good enough in themselves to try making a complete bowl arrangement of doronicum alone, without other kinds of flowers or foliage.

When the need comes for division of roots the gardener may get a surprise when he finds small white tubers, slightly resembling slender white radishes.

The best time to work on dividing doronicum roots is after flowering. First cut down to the base any old flower stems, then lift the clumps which will be composed of leaves coming directly from the rootstocks or tubers.

A group of half a dozen tubers will make a suitable piece for replanting.

If many plants are wanted each tuber with its roots and a leaf or two can be put into a little bed to grow. By fall, they will have increased to a size to set out permanently.

Doronicums like a humusy garden soil, and sunshine for part of each day. Flowers will last well in these conditions.

If seed is allowed to set and spread, inferior flowers are likely to appear on the new plants.

This is one of the dangers of allowing seedlings to grow from the seed of most of our herbaceous perennials. The other danger is the effort of maturing seed usually leads to weakening of the original root.

In a year or two it will die unnoticed, its place being taken by inferior seedlings.

When this happens a newish gardener is likely to think his plant has "reverted" or "gone back," whereas the poorer flowers are in fact on new plants, seedlings of his original which had been either a hybrid or a selected form grown years before by experienced hybridizers and propagated since only by either division of the roots or by rooting cuttings.

Both of these methods ensure identical characteristics of the parent plant being carried to the new plants, whereas seedlings of hybrids or selections can resemble any of the ancestors.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

In many deals, the location of an adversely held king or queen is the factor that determines the destiny of a given contract. Much more infrequently, the correct determination as to which of the opponents holds a specific jack is the key to success.

Today's deal is concerned with the location of a jack. As the play unfolded, declarer found out where it was.

North-South vulnerable. East deals.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Dbl.	Pass	1 NT
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

On West's jack of diamonds opening, a low diamond was played from dummy, and East signalled for a continuation by playing the ten-spot. The eight of diamonds return was captured by East's queen when a low diamond was again played from dummy.

The ace of diamonds was laid down next, South ruffing with the queen of trumps. A trump was then led to the board's ten, after which the jack of trumps was cashed. Dummy's remaining trump was now played, and taken by South's ace, East's last trump being picked up enroute.

A heart was then led to dummy's queen, and East won the trick with his ace. East came back with a diamond, which declarer ruffed with his last trump. The king of hearts was cashed next, East following suit with the jack. Declarer now took a time-out for review and analysis.

It was rather obvious that to fulfill his contract, South had to bring in four club tricks, otherwise he would remain with a heart loser.

The issue was whether to cash the ace, queen, and king of clubs, hoping to fell the jack; or to cash the ace and queen of clubs, and then finesse against West's hoped-for-jack.

East was known to have started with three trumps and six diamonds. He had also followed suit to two leads of hearts. Thus, he had, at most, two clubs.

So declarer cashed his ace and queen of clubs, East following suit both times. His original 13 cards were now an open book. South's remaining club was then led, and the board's ten-spot finessed. On the club king, South discarded his losing heart, and that was that.

YOUR HEALTH

Virus or Allergy May Cause Croup

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Croup has been defined as a noisy, difficult type of breathing, due to some obstruction in the larynx (voice box). It usually attacks very young children. A child can die of it if it is severe enough. Some physicians think that the cause can be a virus, others blame it on an allergic basis, and it could be due to both causes. Commonly, if looked for, a virus can be found. It may be the influenza virus.

Some physicians say that the noisy coughing is due to a swelling of tissues in the lower part of the larynx. Some doctors have the child sit up in bed, and some may give him an antibiotic, although that is not likely to have any effect on a virus.

In the worst cases, a tracheotomy may be performed; by this is meant the making of a hole into the tube (trachea) that carries air from the voice box down into the lungs. Sometimes a soft artificial tube can be passed down through the voice box. Whether or not such work has to be done depends on whether the child is very short of breath and is turning blue (what we physicians call cyanotic).

A humidification or moistening of the air in the child's room may help. Sometimes the giving of a little epinephrin (an easily available drug very helpful in asthma) will help; also sometimes hydrocortisone or a cough syrup will help.

In some cases, the physician must wonder if a child has sucked some coin or little marble or something into his trachea. Then an X-ray examination should be made quickly of the neck and chest.

Obviously, the best possible thing for a child with severe croup is to be cared for by a good children's specialist.

Thousands of people today know something about the caloric value of the food that they eat, and they know that if they eat much of a high-calorie food, such as fat, they will be more likely to gain weight than if they eat a low-calorie food like lettuce.

What people often do not realize is that the amount of exercise someone takes makes a difference in how his body uses the food he eats. The person who exercises a great deal, like a professional football man does, will use up a tremendous number of calories, hence he can eat very well and not gain weight.

But if a woman or a young girl eats a great deal, especially of rich food, covered with butter and cream, and if then she sits around and never exercises, her extra and unneeded calorie supply will be stored in her body as fat. Her sister who plays tennis every afternoon may use up the extra calories and may stay thin.

I was much interested in an article by Drs. K. C. Archibald and W. L. Gelter of Temple University in Philadelphia, Pa. which listed various activities and the number of calories we use up per minute when we do them.

For instance, just sitting, we spend 1.2 calories per minute; if we chat, we spend 1.4. When a woman is typing, she spends 1.8. If a person is walking on the level at three miles an hour, he or she spends 2.2 calories per minute. However, on walking up a five-degree slope, the person will spend 7.2 calories.

When he is golfing, he will spend 5 calories; someone who is swimming rapidly will spend 5 calories.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Macdonald Suffered Rapid Misfortunes

By BOB BOWMAN

Sir John A. Macdonald may have been Canada's greatest prime minister. He certainly was one of them. Yet he had a drinking problem that sometimes made him incompetent. On one occasion he staggered onto a platform to speak and said "Most people prefer me drunk to George Brown sober." Brown was Sir John's most bitter political opponent and publisher of the Toronto "Globe" which often accused Macdonald of drunkeness when, in fact, he was ill. Some of Macdonald's opponents admitted in later years that they had been unjust to him.

One of these occasions was on May 6, 1870. Macdonald had been under terrific pressure since Confederation, although he seemed to have reached the pinnacle of success. There were a number of blows in rapid succession. It was learned that his daughter by his second marriage would never be a normal child. He got so deeply in debt that he had to mortgage all his assets to a bank. Confederation supporters were defeated in Newfoundland. Then came the Red River uprising.

On May 6 Macdonald was having a quiet lunch in his office before going to the House of Commons when he suddenly clutched the table, swayed, and fell to the floor. There were the usual comments when he did not appear in the Commons, but the fact was that Macdonald was so ill that he could not even be moved from his office. He had to stay there until June 2, constantly attended by his doctor and nurses, of whom the most competent was his wife, Agnes.

On July 2, it was possible to get him on board the government steamship "Druid" with his wife, daughter Margaret, and Dr. Grant, and they cruised down the St. Lawrence to Charlottetown. Prince Edward Island had rejected Confederation but could not have been more helpful to Macdonald in this time of need. The ship was met by Colonel John Hamilton Gray, who had acted as host of the Charlottetown conference, and Macdonald was taken to Falconwood, a comfortable home on the banks of the Hillsborough River, nearby. He stayed there until September 16 and made a marvellous recovery.

Other events on May 6:

1536 — Cartier captured Chief Donacona to take him to France.

1680 — LaSalle arrived at Fort Frontenac, now Kingston, Ontario.

1780 — Bishop Laval died at Quebec.

1720 — First meeting of Council of Nova Scotia.

1776 — Governor Carleton drove U.S. forces from Quebec.

1777 — General Burgoyne arrived at Quebec to succeed Carleton as military commander.

1851 — Steamer "Commerce" sank in Lake Erie with 24 lives lost including members of Welsh Fusiliers.

1854 — New York, Newfoundland, and London Telegraph Company was founded.

1886 — Vancouver was incorporated as a city.

1910 — Death of King Edward VII succeeded by George V.

1950 — Fire at Rimouski, Quebec, caused $10 million damage.

1954 — U.S. House of Representatives approved St. Lawrence Seaway deal with Canada.

Jeff came in with a big grin on his face. "Hi, Mom," he said. "I beat Alan in the test. He was good, but I got eleven morks more."

"That's great," Joan smiled. "The math test, eh?"

"Sure." The boy nodded. "It's funny his marks, multiplied by what I got, make 2132. That's the number of his home."

What marks did Alan get?

SOLUTION THURSDAY

Southeast Regimes Bolster Armed Forces

By Reuters

A number of Southeast Asian governments, fearful of Communist insurgency and guerrilla attacks, are intensifying efforts to bolster their armed forces.

From Thailand to Malaysia, there is a new awareness of the need for superior military strength to protect rugged jungle borders which give ideal protection to infiltrators.

The new Cambodian government under Premier Lon Nol is seeking American and other help in a drive to flush out Viet Cong troops who have long operated from Cambodian sanctuaries in the wings of the Vietnam war theatre.

There are an estimated 40,000 Communist troops in the Cambodian provinces bordering Vietnam and Laos.

American forces now are pushing ahead with South Vietnamese soldiers in Cambodia's Fish Hook pocket, a region of rice paddies, rubber trees and jungle. They have been ordered to destroy a secret Communist command centre.

HAS SMALL ARMY

Cambodia has only about 40,000 troops. Its army, equipped with light tanks, armored cars, anti-aircraft and field guns, accounts for 35,000 men. Cambodia's navy has fewer than 20 vessels, all light, and the 2,000-man air force has 45 combat planes.

Cambodia also has a force of 100,000 armed police and home guards for local defence.

Also bordering the Vietnam battlefield is Laos, where a prolonged struggle between government and pro-government Pathet-Lao forces shows no sign of easing.

The total strength of the Royal Laotian forces is about 65,000 men, including a tiny river-bound navy equipped with small gunboats and landing craft and an air force with 50 combat aircraft.

Against them are ranged some 30,000 Pathet Lao troops with tanks and armored cars, supported by some 60,000 regular North Vietnamese troops. They control the eastern half of Laos and the border with Vietnam and maintain the Ho Chi Minh trail across Laos. This is the main Communist supply line to the South Vietnamese battlefields.

THAI WATCHING

Watching the situation in Laos and Cambodia with increasing alarm is Thailand, which already has one of the more powerful armies in the region.

The premier and commander of the armed forces, Field Marshal Thanom Kittikachorn, is increasing the striking power of his forces with American help.

The army has some 100,000 men, 10,000 of them serving in Vietnam, equipped with tanks, armored half-tracks, scout cars and 105-millimetre and 155-millimetre howitzers.

The United States plans to deliver a battery of Hawk surface-to-air missiles to Thailand shortly. They were promised for 1971 but military sources in Bangkok report that because of increased Communist infiltration from Laos, the delivery date is being brought forward.

Thailand's well-equipped air force now stands at 40,000 men, while the 21,000-man navy has some 60 vessels including frigates, submarine chasers, armored gunboats and coastal minesweepers.

A 40,000-man volunteer defence corps and border police complete Thailand's armed manpower. The government recently set up its first arms plant.

USE AIR BASES

The United States uses airbases in northern Thailand for bombing missions in Laos and Vietnam.

Thailand has a long, sparsely populated border with Laos where Communist forces can filter across undetected. The government estimates that some 2,000 Communist guerrillas are active in the northern provinces, 1,000 in central areas and 1,500 on the border with Malaysia.

Malaysian Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman has warned that the outlawed Communist party is trying to start an insurrection but said his government can cope with the situation.

Some 45,000 men make up the Malaysian armed forces. The 3,000-man navy has frigates, coastal and shore minesweepers and patrol boats. There are 20 combat aircraft in the air force.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Mrs. Frank Hawthorn, Jack and Vivian wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends who gave their kindness, sympathy and prayers during the illness and at the death of a dearly loved husband and brother. Special thanks to Drs. Wong, Homer and Lockyer, and to Brigadier Underhill and Major Wood for their constant visitation, which meant so much to us all, and to our dear friends, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Paterson.

We wish to thank our relatives and many friends for their lovely cards and flowers and kind expressions of sympathy during the loss of our dear little Sherri. Sincere appreciation is extended to our neighbors, Dr. C. A. McNeill, Rev. H. D. Robinson, Dawson Construction and employees for their kind help and understanding words.—Norman and Christine, Doug and Minnie Fleetwood.

The memory of the kindness and sympathy shown me by my relatives, friends and business associates will remain with me throughout the years. I want you all to know that I am truly grateful for the comfort you have given me in my sorrow. Special thanks to George and Trudy Heller, Dr. Billung-Meyer and McCalls Funeral Home.—Mrs. Heather Ruttan.

9 IN MEMORIAM

JOHNSON—In loving memory of our dear Mum, who passed away May 6, 1967, and dear Dad, who passed away March 5, 1954.

"Dear Lord, forgive a silent tear,
A constant wish that they were here.
Others were taken, yes, we know,
But they were ours, and we loved them so."

—Always remembered by daughter Gladys, son Henry and families.

JOHNSON—Treasured memories of our dear "Nanny," Edith Johnson, who passed away May 6, 1967, and our dear "Bobo," William Johnson, March 5, 1954.

"Death seems final—but love is forever."

—Ever remembered and sadly missed by granddaughter Dianna, Brian and great-grandchildren, Deborah, Michael, Kenneth and Kevin; also granddaughter Joanna, Paul, and great-grandchildren, Christopher and Kelly.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

NANNY. 8 p.m., Channel 2. "Element of Risk." When a little girl's balloon breaks and the youngster consequently is afraid to risk blowing up another, there is an object lesson for the professor, reluctant to see a former college sweetheart.

BEVERLY HILLBILLIES. 8:30 p.m., Channels 7, 12. (Repeat). Con-man Phil Silvers returns for another round of gulling the rich Clampetts. As Shifty Shafer, Silvers plans to sell Jed the island of Manhattan in bits and pieces, with special rates for Central Park, the Staten Island Ferry, and other choice locations. Again, Silvers does most of the talking, playing his old TV character in mufti.

MEDICAL CENTRE. 9 p.m., Channel 12. (Repeat.) A two-hankie show. In for a thyroid examination, a rich widow meets a cute Mexican kid whose mother was killed in a cross-walk accident. The widow is running away from involvement, but Doc Gannon brings the two together hoping for a happy ending. The hour is really for the ladies, combining as it does a reaching-out theme and an orphan boy.

MUSIC HALL. 9 p.m., Channel 5. The second part of this "Down Home U.S.A." Musical special starring Phil Harris and Bobbie Gentry, and featuring the talents of Bernadette Peters, John Hartford, Roy Clark and America's Junior Miss, Jackie Bennington. There are songs galore and Phil Harris joins Roy Clark for some jabs at old-fashioned medicine. Musical highlights include Bernadette Peters' solo to "California Dreamin'"; John Hartford's "Tear-Stained Monologue"; and Bobbie Gentry's "Rainmaker."

BOOK BEAT, 8:30 p.m. Channel 9. Mystery, myth and history are all blended by author Elie Wiesel in his "A Beggar in Jerusalem," set during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. Wiesel discusses his own confrontation with moral dilemmas with interviewer Bob Cromie.

THEN CAME BRONSON. 10 p.m., Channel 5. "The Runner." (Repeat.) This was the premiere episode of the series and it afforded Michael Parks as Bronson ample opportunity to show the girls his profile and to prove that he is not just a worthless drifter, but a compassionate man who abhors violence. Accepting a job at a camp for disturbed children, Bronson becomes attached to one youngester (Mark Lester) and tries to bring the child out of his shell his own way, rather than by the method proposed by the camp's director.

NEWS IN PERSPECTIVE. 9 p.m., Channel 9. Host Clifton Daniel and his New York Times colleagues, Harrison Salisbury and Max Frankel — all of whom are former Moscow correspondents — discuss Soviet-American relations with a group of Russian delegates to the National Convocation on the Challenge of Building Peace at the United Nations.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30: Channel 12: Gunslinger (1956 Western), John Ireland, Beverly Garland. A widow takes over as town marshal.

5:30: Channel 13: To be announced.

8:30: Channel 8: Father Goose (1964 Comedy), Cary Grant, Leslie Caron, Trevor Howard. A hard-drinking drifter is persuaded to act as a plane spotter on a deserted South Sea island.

9:00 p.m.: Channel 7: Raintree County (1957 Drama), Montgomery Clift, Elizabeth Taylor, Eva Marie Saint. Sprawling story of a Southern belle who stops at nothing to get what she wants.

11:40: Channel 2: Katie Did It (1951 Comedy), Ann Blyth, Mark Stevens, Cecil Kellaway. A small town girl runs into a New York City slicker.

11:00 p.m.: Channel 13: Dark Corner (1946 Drama), Mark Stevens, Clifton Webb. A detective is neatly framed for murder.

12:01: Channel 6: Father Goose (see above).

12:01: Channel 7: Back to Bataan (1945 Drama), John Wayne, Anthony Quinn. An American colonel forms a guerrilla army in the Philippines.

12:01: Channel 8: Too Late Blues (1962 Drama), Bobby Darin, Stella Stevens. Unpleasant story of a jazz musician who steals the affections of a blonde from his friend.

I'M MRS. LEE. MY HUSBAND and I are resident managers of the VALENCIA. This beautiful, brand new apartment is superbly located adjoining Beacon Hill Park and only two blocks from waterfront. We are close to everything, but, and this is important, our street is quiet. Of course we have wall-to-wall carpet, very excellent soundproofing, elevator, controlled entrance, free cablevision, free parking, balconies, colored appliances and drapes. Will you come and see our spacious sparkling new suites?

Regulations Toughened

Provincial park regulations have been toughened to permit park attendants to record the names and addresses of every person registering as an overnight camper.

Parks Director Bob Ahrens said today the move, which will be tested this year at Cultus Lake and possibly Alouette Lake campgrounds on the mainland, will enable park rangers to have better control of behavior in the parks.

Under the old system, the identities of overnight guests were often unknown and control of rowdiness was difficult.

Ahrens said the next step in increasing powers of the rangers might be to give them power of arrest for misdemeanors in parks. This would require change in legislation, possibly at the next session of the legislature.

The new system won't apply to any Island parks this year.

The regulations also ban "plinking" in a wide range of heavily-used parks. Ahrens said no-hunting laws in the parks did not apply to people shooting at cans, bottles or other inanimate and sometimes living objects.

Ahrens said rangers will be able to eject unregistered park visitors after a "certain hour" if necessary.

Committee On 'Games'

The Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee Tuesday struck a special committee to study the possibility of bringing the Canada Games here in 1973.

The committee will hold its first meeting Monday evening in the McPherson Lounge at Royal Athletic Park and is expected to report back to the intermunicipal group on June 2.

In 1969, the Games, including most phases of competitive sport, were held in the Halifax-Dartmouth area.

Staging the games cost Halifax $212,896 and Dartmouth $87,104.

The federal government tossed $1,138,000 into the pot and the provincial government of Nova Scotia $300,000.

Ald. Ove Witt said he felt the Games could be held in the Greater Victoria area for much less cost.

"We have just about everything we need," he told the committee.

AND NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN THAT, in case the Debentures specified in this Notice be not presented for redemption (in whole or in part as above provided) on the date of redemption above mentioned all interest thereon, or on the proportionate amount thereof to be redeemed, shall cease from and after the said date.

THE ATTENTION OF HOLDERS OF THE SAID 7% CONVERTIBLE SINKING FUND DEBENTURES, SERIES AA, IS DRAWN TO THE RIGHT OF CONVERSION TO WHICH THE HOLDERS OF THE SAID DEBENTURES ARE ENTITLED UNDER ARTICLE VI OF THE TRUST INDENTURE. In brief, the Trust Indenture provides that the holder of each of the said Debentures has the right to convert such Debenture into common shares of the Company at a rate of Seventy (70) such common shares as presently constituted for each One Thousand Dollar face value of the Debenture and the Debenture holder shall be entitled without demand to interest accrued on all such Debentures up to but not including the day of surrender of such Debenture for conversion.

THE TRUST INDENTURE ALSO PROVIDES THAT SUCH RIGHT OF CONVERSION MAY BE EXERCISED BY THE HOLDER OF EACH OF THE SAID DEBENTURES AT ANY TIME BEFORE THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS THREE (3) BUSINESS DAYS IMMEDIATELY PRECEDING THE REDEMPTION DATE FIXED IN THIS NOTICE FOR THE REDEMPTION OF THE SAID DEBENTURES. The Trust Indenture further provides that the holder of any of the said Debentures shall exercise such right to convert Debentures into common shares of the Company by delivering to the said Trustee at its principal office in one of the Cities of Vancouver or Calgary, Canada:

(a) Such Debenture together with all unmatured coupons thereto pertaining and with, if the Debenture be registered as to principal and the said Trustee so requires, a power of attorney to transfer the same duly executed in blank to the satisfaction of the said Trustee;

(b) A written request signed by the holder of such Debentures or his attorney or agent duly appointed in writing to the satisfaction of the said Trustee exercising his right to convert such Debenture and naming the person or persons in whose name or names the said common shares are to be issued, the number to be issued to each and the address of each;

And, if the holder of such Debenture shall request the issuance of common shares in the name or names of a person or persons other than himself, by paying such further sum of lawful money of Canada as may be required to satisfy any transfer taxes or other governmental taxes or charges arising by reason thereof.

Three Unions Sign Contracts

A promising breakthrough in B.C.'s embattled construction industry Tuesday night brought the first contract agreements between employers and unions since lockouts began nearly three weeks ago.

Three unions — boilermakers, iron workers and machinists — in a joint statement with the Construction Labor Relations Association, representing 600 companies, agreed to an average increase of $1 an hour, with adjustments, in two-year contracts.

None of the three was among eight unions locked out by CLRA, which said it was reacting to unreasonable wage demands by construction trades. A ninth union has been given notice of lockout.

CLRA and the metal trades said they agreed to the principle of uniform contracts, providing for wage parity in 1972 at $6.20 an hour for top-rated tradesmen. They also will get parity in pension, health and welfare benefits.

RATIFICATION

The association's president, Charles J. Connagahan, said ratification of the agreement represented a breakthrough for the industry in its efforts to establish a rational wage structure.

The increase is equivalent to 7 per cent per year, plus fringe improvements, the same raise offered to other trades. Carpenters negotiators have rejected the offer and urged their members to vote against it in a secret ballot taken last week.

Results of the carpenter vote, involving some 9,000 eligible members of the union, are likely to be ready Friday.

Strike action was taken today by some 200 members of the glaziers union, the ninth union upon which CLRA served lockout notice, but which was still not locked out.

The union voted by a 71 per cent margin to reject a two-year offer of 90 cents an hour wage increase.

Picketing will be done only at shops where glaziers are employed, consistent with construction trades policy of not picketing construction sites.

The idea behind this was to keep as many construction trades working as possible, but in spite of it, more and more jobs are closing down due to a shortage of concrete and construction materials caused by shutdown of major suppliers.

Flag Change Urged

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (Reuters) — The Labor party New Zealand's opposition party, approved Tuesday a resolution asking that the present flag, bearing the Union Jack, and the British anthem God Save the Queen be replaced with a national flag and anthem.

PINBALL PAYOFFS PLEASE LADS

SOUTHPORT, England (UPI) — A local lawyer has asked police to remove a pinball machine popular with youngsters at a seaside amusement arcade. For every "goal" scored on the machine, the players won a teasing picture of a buxom stripper — and for five goals they got the jackpot—a nude.

Nicholson to Open School Residences

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — The $750,000 new residential complex at Shawnigan Lake School will be officially opened by Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson May 16.

Rev. F. R. Gartrell, new bishop of British Columbia, will dedicate the new buildings that are replacing an older structure destroyed by fire in August, 1968, the same day.

"We are delighted with the new buildings," said L. P. MacLachlan, headmaster. "While they are modern in design, they still fit into the traditional atmosphere of our campus."

The new residences, already in use, each provide accommodation for 43 boys, a married housemaster and a single assistant housemaster.

It will also be "open day" at the school with displays of student work and demonstrations of school activities.

RED-EYED DETECTIVE SNIFFS OUT POLLUTER

MUSKEGON, Mich. (UPI) — Police chief of detectives Arnold Van Dam cried all the way to work wondering about a new and particularly virulent form of air pollution.

"The air in this community is getting worse," Van Dam said after he began crying in his car. "I could hardly see."

"It had rained during the night and the trees were wet and dripping. My wipers were on and the car window was open. And then something started hurting my eyes," he said.

The red-eyed detective became red-faced when he discovered that somehow he had switched on a breast-pocket tear gas canister and fumes drifted up to his face.

"I polluted the air myself," Van Dam admitted.

Track Honors To Claremont

Reg Underwood paced Claremont to the team championship in a high school boys' track and field meet against Shawnigan Lake and Oak Bay on Tuesday with first-place finishes in the long jump, triple jump and javelin events.

Underwood also anchored the two relay wins at Centennial Stadium.

Claremont finished with 231 points to Oak Bay's 135 and Shawnigan's 111.

Bob Ross provided a double win for Oak Bay with firsts in the 1,500-metre and 3,000-metre runs. He finished the longer distance in the outstanding time of nine minutes, three seconds.

A double win in the shot put and discus events was recorded for Shawnigan by Pratt Heatherington.

Wrestling Card On Tap Saturday

Two titans clash in one half of a double main event Saturday night as professional wrestling returns to Memorial Arena after a two-week absence.

Tex McKenzie, six-foot-seven and 270 pounds, will take on Gene Kiniski, 6-5 and 272 pounds. Bulldog Brown tackles Dean Higuchi in the other half of the main event.

In other bouts, Jack Bence will team up with Vansky in a tag-team match against Duncan McTavish and Don Morrow and Pierre LeGrand battles Steve Bolus.

Battles start at 8:15 p.m.

Bombers Acquire Two Top Choices

WINNIPEG (CP) Winnipeg Blue Bombers have announced the signing of their most sought after American prospect and their number one Canadian college draft choice.

Signed by the Western Football Conference club were Larry Roberts, a 210-pound running back from Central Missouri State, and Bob Larose, a 210-pound defensive back from University of Western Ontario.

'New' Chamberlain Has Point to Make

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Next time Wilt Chamberlain comes on your TV screen — like tonight for instance — look a little closer.

You'll notice a different Chamberlain.

There's something he wants now and wants badly, and when Wilt Chamberlain wants something he takes on some of the qualities of a tidal wave and a great many things get swept away before him.

What Chamberlain wants is an NBA championship and in order to get it, Los Angeles Lakers must defeat New York Knicks tonight in Los Angeles and again later this week in New York.

Jerry West and the rest of the Lakers want the title too, but nobody wants it more than Chamberlain.

Able a ballplayer as he is, Chamberlain has been subject to criticism ever since entering the league 10 years ago. It doesn't matter he's the greatest scorer in NBA history or that he revolutionized the game's economic system with a yearly salary estimated as high as $333,333. He still is a prime target.

"For that kind of money," some say, "he ought to at least be able to sink a coupla fouls."

"Where was he when it counted last year?" others ask. "In those last minutes of the final championship game with Boston?"

Wilt Chamberlain was on the bench then with a damaged knee that's where he was, and there were those who still feel he should have been out there playing against the Celties giving it everything he had left, the same way Jerry West did.

"West once broke his nose, had it packed and played the entire game," one of Wilt's critics reminds. "Chamberlain sits down if his spirit is broken."

That's not really true and maybe that's why winding up with a winner now is so important to Chamberlain. Only a few months ago he underwent knee surgery and his own doctor said he would never play again this season. But he is playing and what's more he's having a great series, sweatband around his forehead and all.

"You were limping a little out there," somebody said to him earlier in this series with the Knicks.

"I limp all the time," Chamberlain brushed off the remark. "I don't walk too good."

There's no question the Lakers' celebrated centre is "up" for these games with the Knicks. He feels he has to prove something.

"I'm the only athlete I know of who's pretty good at his position that everybody else is telling how to play it," he says. "They don't wanna see me do this, they don't wanna see me do that. When I shoot the fadeaway they say I should be going for the basket and dunking the basketball, then when I go in they say I should be doing something else."

Chamberlain thinks he's alone in that regard. He isn't. People still keep telling Jack Dempsey how he should've fought Gene Tunney and Jack's going on 75. Chamberlain is only 34. Dempsey never bothers arguing anymore, but Chamberlain usually answers back. He figures it's important.

Only the other day Wilt got worked up when he heard that Irv Kosloff, the Philadelphia 76ers' owner, was saying he was paying Billy Cunningham more than any player he ever had.

Chamberlain said that was a lie and Kosloff later said he was sorry he started the whole thing.

Chamberlain is much better off when he relaxes. Not only at the foul line but off the court also. Like the other night after he helped the Lakers to their first victory by batting down a couple of Knicks' passes.

Somebody mentioned the fact to him following the game and after Wilt Chamberlain was through listening, he dead-panned:

"Yeah, I tried to — even with my wooden hands."

Tonight's game will be telecast on Channel 4 starting at 7 p.m. PDT.

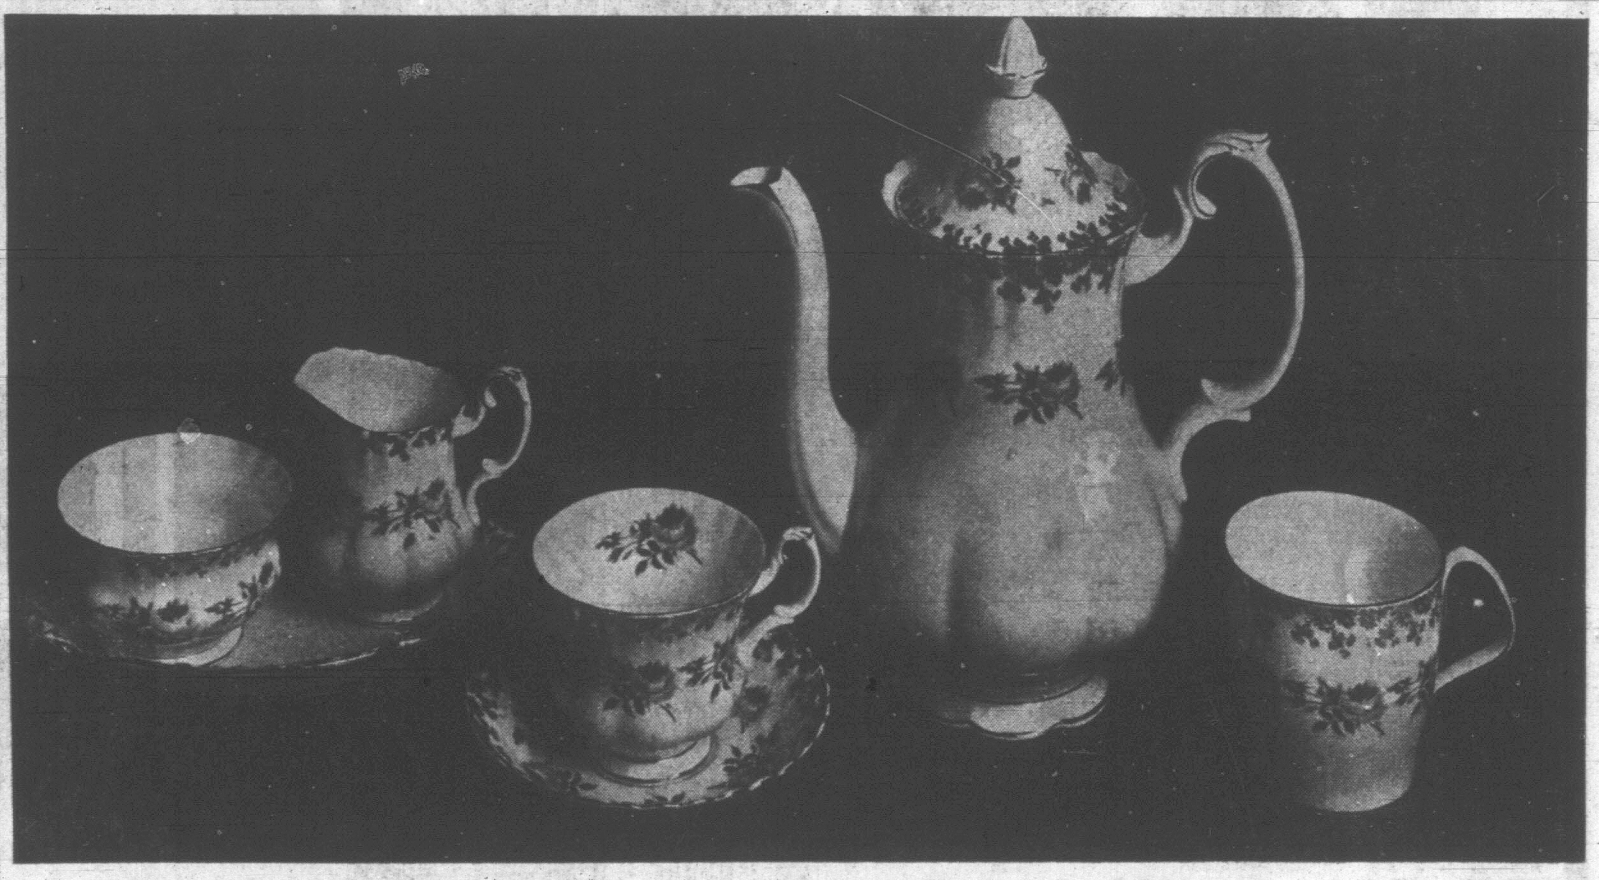
Mother's Day May 10th . . . English Bone China!



Say Thank You, Mother, with Royal Albert

The enduring beauty of Royal Albert will convey your appreciation on that special day and for years to come. Only the best is good enough for mother and this fine English bone china has a whiteness, translucency and strength unmatched by any other ceramic body. The pattern, "Dainty Pink" is accented by a traditional shape with gentle fluting at the top.

Gold filagree enriches the delicate floral wreath of soft pink roses. The coffee pot with lid, cream and sugar with tray lends a festive air to after dinner coffee. And gracious coffee mugs complete the set. Equally attractive and practical is the 7" tea plate that matches beautifully with the teacup and saucer. Whichever you choose, the price is modest, the quality regal.

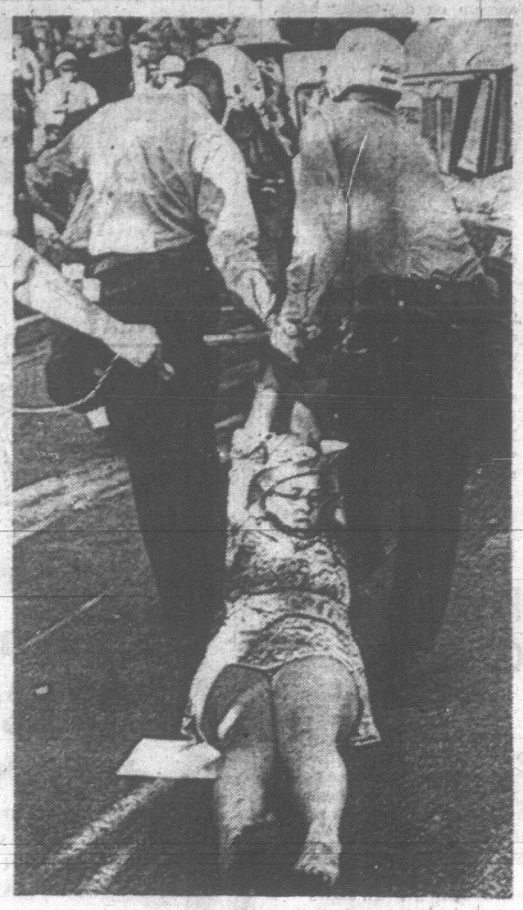
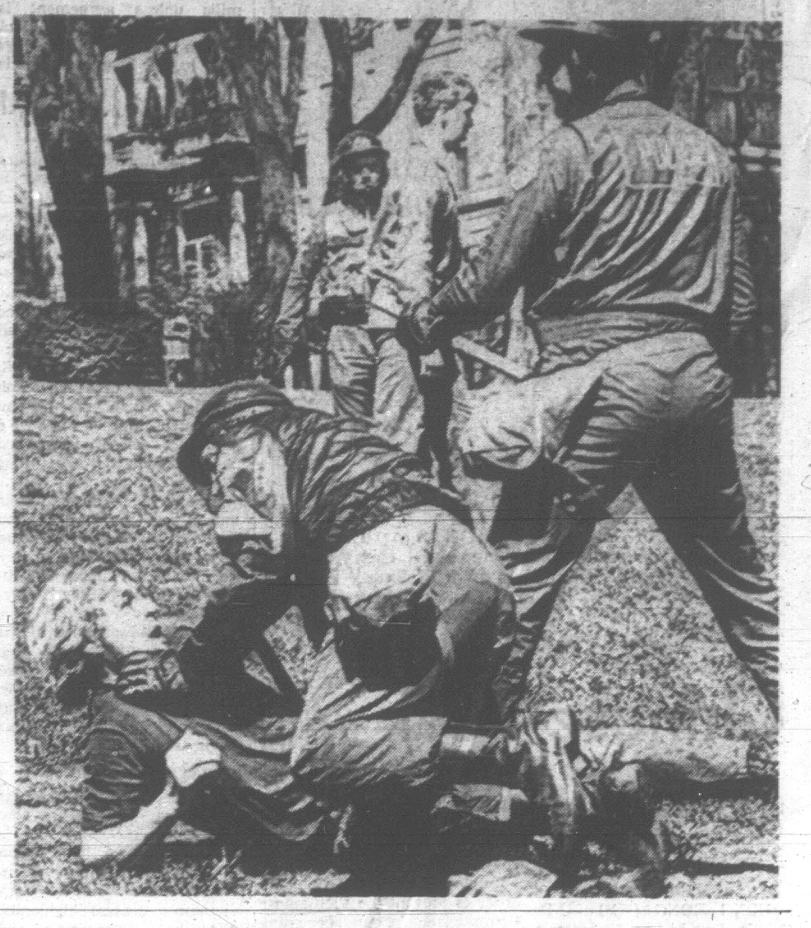
Wave of Violence Sweeps U.S. as Protests Grow





OUCH! That's the predominant word heard across the northern section of the United States Tuesday as protests against U.S. involvement in Cambodia and against the deaths of four students at Kent, Ohio, gained momentum. AT LEFT—A motorcyclist, caught in a traffic jam in Mankata, Minn., decided prone protesters wouldn't stop him from his appointed destination. He drove right over one. CENTRE—Skinned heels was the result of this uncerimonius departure from a Washington, D.C., intersection where more than 2,500 slowed rush traffic by handing out peace leaflets. AT RIGHT—At Madison, Wisc., police catch and throw to the ground a demonstrator who tried to force the University of Wisconsin to close. Royal Columbian Takeover Hinted

By DON VIPOND

The board of management of New Westminster's Royal Columbian Hospital holds its regular meeting tonight with a startling additional item on the agenda.

It's Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's statement on a radio hot line show Tuesday night that he is considering recommending to the cabinet that the government take over administration of Royal Columbian because of "mismanagement" by the administration.

If the government did appoint a public administrator, it would be an unprecedented move made possible by legislation passed at the last session.

J. W. S. Biggs, the hospital board's chairman, told the Times from Vancouver today he didn't see how health care for the area could be assisted by a government takeover of administration.

He said the board would consider certain requests from Loffmark at its meeting tonight and make a statement on the situation Thursday.

'SINGLED OUT'

"Apparently Mr. Loffmark feels we are to be singled out as the glaring example of mismanagement," Biggs said.

The health minister said Tuesday night that administrative costs at Royal Columbian are out of line with those at Vancouver General Hospital. He added he had no quarrel with a recent wage settlement for staff members or medical employees.

Hospitals in B.C. are run by boards which have provincial government and municipal representation. There are 14 members on the board of the 445-bed Royal Columbian. The hospital was founded in 1862.

NOT FIRST TIME

It's not the first time the hospital and health minister have clashed.

Last June 63 doctors using the hospital took a day off to picket the Legislature and press Loffmark on expansion plans for the hospital.

The doctors argued they were working under 19th century conditions and the hospital was "one of the worst in Canada."

RENOVATIONS

Subsequently a major renovation program was approved which will cost about $10 million and see the hospital's 1912 wing replaced, a wing built in 1950 updated and more beds and services added.

A month ago Loffmark culminated a series of warnings on soaring hospital operating costs by announcing that the British Columbia Insurance Service, the agency overseeing hospital function, would provide the money for only 70 per cent of salary increases granted hospital staffs this year.

Secondary Pickets Close Island Mills

Court registry offices in Victoria, Duncan and Nanaimo reported at noon today they have yet to receive applications for injunctions against two unions involved in the three-day-old strike of coastal tugs and resulting forest industry closures.

Spokesmen for towboat companies and major timber companies said Tuesday they would flood courts with applications for injunctions against members of the International Woodworkers of America and the Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

About 450 men were laid off at the MacMillan Bloedel Chemainus sawmill Monday when IWA boom crews refused to handle logs ordinarily handled by CMSG crews.

At Port Alberni Tuesday crews of 12 "dozer boats" operated by IWA members refused to enter a log storage area, causing shutdown of two large sawmills.

By today an estimated 1,035 men at Island Milling and logging operations had been laid off as a result of the Merchant Service Guild strike against the B.C. Towboat Owners' Association.

As of today mills affected included Butler Bros. Logging at Sooke (85 men), Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber Co. at Jordan River (80), Rayonier Canada (B.C.) Ltd. at Jordan River (90), Sooke Forest Products Ltd. Goodridge mill at Sooke (250), B.C. Forest Products Ltd. Point Ellice and Victoria sawmill divisions cut grave yard shifts, Malloch and Mosely Logging at Alta Lake (50), with about 30 more expected at Muir Creek by the weekend, and MacMillan Bloedel logging at China Creek, Alberni Inlet (35).

Forest giant MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. at noon announced it will seek B.C. Supreme Court action Thursday morning to keep its mill and logging divisions operating in the face of a coastal towboat strike and the refusal of its employees to handle "hot" cargoes.

RUNOFF for the governorship of Alabama was assured today when neither former governor George Wallace (above) nor Governor Albert Brewer received more than 50 per cent of the vote in the Democratic primary. At noon, with 85 per cent of the vote counted, Wallace has 353,424 against 370,323 for Brewer. See story Page 28.

Reds Launch Viet Offensive

Viet Troops May Stay

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—South Vietnamese troops may be in Cambodia to stay, according to a Pentagon source here.

When the American come out at the end of June—President Nixon's deadline—the Vietnamese forces will remain indefinitely in the Parrot's Beak area.

The source said American troops may leave Cambodia well ahead of the deadline date, possibly by the end of May, if the search and destroy operations are concluded.

RAINING

Weather conditions could be a factor controlling the American troop withdrawal. Unexpected scattered rains have already started to fall, preceding the onset of the normal Southeast Monsoon season due later this month.

Sources reported that plans now under consideration call for new forays against Communist sanctuaries in Cambodia as well as the use of small numbers of Thai troops in Northern Cambodia and Southern Laos.

Of the first three allied attacks into Cambodia—three new spearheads developed Tuesday night—the Se San River operation—involving the two-brigade 4th U.S. Division and the 22nd ARVN (Army of the Republic of Vietnam)

CIVIL UNREST HITS SAIGON

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government moved four battalions of troops into Saigon today as a precaution against growing civil unrest in the capital.

Earlier, soldiers burst into the national pagoda in Saigon and opened fire on about 600 monks, nuns and students occupying the building, a South Vietnamese spokesman said. Ten were reported killed in the incident.

40 Americans Killed In Major Actions

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. and South Vietnamese forces opened three new fronts inside Cambodia today, but in Vietnam the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese launched attacks that killed 40 Americans and wounded 84, the U.S. command reported.

One North Vietnamese attack, on an artillery base south of the demilitarized zone, killed 29 Americans, the largest American toll in a single action in 20 months.

Thirty more Americans from the 101st Airborne Division were reported wounded in the attack on the artillery base 16 miles south of the DMZ. Initial reports said 15 North Vietnamese were killed.

While a heavy mortar barrage pinned down the U.S. troops, the North Vietnamese hit the base firing rocket grenades and rifles.

Sharp fighting and terror attacks were reported at several other points in the northern provinces, with six more Americans and 15 guerrillas killed. A grenade thrown into a police station in Da Nang killed six Vietnamese policemen and wounded six.

CONCENTRATE ON NORTH

The North Vietnamese appeared to be putting most of their retaliatory effort into the northern provinces. U.S. officials claim the operations in Cambodia have disrupted Communist supply lines to the south of South Vietnam.

Thousands more American and South Vietnamese troops crossed into Cambodia in the biggest offensive of the war.

Informed sources said between 20,000 and 25,000 American troops and about an equal number of South Vietnamese now are hunting North Vietnamese and Viet Cong base camps in Cambodia at six points along 250 miles of the border.

The Southern allied commands claimed more than 2,500 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed, most of them by air strikes, since the first offensive was launched Thursday. Thousands of tons of arms, ammunition, other military equipment and food have been captured or destroyed, headquarters said.

But they still have not located the Communist headquarters reported to be in Cambodia.

BOURASSA SEEKS HELP FROM OTTAWA

The creation of 100,000 more jobs in the province of Quebec will not be too difficult, premier-elect Robert Bourassa tells Peter C. Newman in the second of a two-part series on Quebec's future which appears on Page 3.

"Normal expansion of the economy will provide 60,000 jobs and a stable government will also attract plenty of outside capital."

Bourassa is also seeking help from Ottawa in accelerating start of construction of a billion-dollar jumbo airport and an increase in grants for low-cost housing.

NATIONAL GUARD 'TRIGGER-HAPPY'

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Senator Stephen Young (Dem.-Ohio) said today the fatal shooting of four students at Kent State University Monday was touched off when an Ohio national guardsman accidentally fired his rifle after being struck by a tear-gas canister.

Other national guardsmen opened fire on students, he added.

"There was no sniper," the senator said after receiving reports on the incident from two staff members in Kent, Ohio.

Young said that during the confrontation a student apparently hurled back at the advancing guardsmen a canister still partly filled with tear gas, which had been lobbed at the students by the troops.

He said the canister struck a guardsmen on the shoulder or upper arm "and his gun fired accidentally."

Other guardsmen "then fired instantly," Young said.

He said that based on reports from two of his aides who went to the scene, he is convinced no order was given to troops to open fire.

They were "just trigger-happy national guardsmen."

Nixon Orders Ohio Probe

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Nixon has ordered a full-scale investigation by the justice department into the fatal shooting of four Kent State University students by Ohio national guardsmen Monday.

Nixon's call for a complete probe was disclosed by the White House after he met today with six young male students from Kent State.

Railway Crossing Smash Kills Eight in Spokane

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A mother and seven of her children died today in the collision of their station wagon and a freight train as she drove the children to school.

An eighth child survived the shattering impact of the Burlington Northern freight train with the automobile at a grade crossing in the Spokane Valley just east of here.

Killed were Katherine Lorraine Krank, 36, and her children Rhonda, 17, Audrey, 16, Kenneth, 14, Dana, 13, David, 11, and twin girls, Anita and Barbara, 6.

The injured girl, reported in serious condition in hospital, was identified as Carla, 8.

Police said the car was northbound and the 53-car freight was westbound, when the engine of the train struck the loaded station wagon.

A track supervisor for Burlington Northern who witnessed the collision said the car never hesitated before pulling onto the tracks in front of the train.

There was a crossbar marking the grade crossing but no blinking light.

Chinese Seek Long Conflict

(Analysis)

HONG KONG (WP) — Peking's decision Tuesday to break relations with the Phnom Penh regime and recognize Prince Norodom Sihanouks government-in exile — nearly two months after his ouster — suggests that the Chinese welcome a worsening situation in the Indochina region.

Over the long term, the Chinese use of Sihanouk is consistent with their efforts to promote a divided Indochina in order to prevent the Vietnamese Communists from becoming dominant in the area.

For the dream of China's rulers over the centuries has been a Southeast Asia that is compliant with their wishes if not actually under their hegemony.

As far back as 1954, at the Geneva Conference that ended the French war in Indochina, Chinese premier Chou En-Lai defended Sihanouk against North Vietnamese demands that their own proteges be included in the Cambodian delegation.

ASSURANCES

On several occasions since then, Sihanouk has claimed to have had assurances from the Chinese that they would protect Cambodia against Hanoi.

While the Chinese cannot really think that the prince will return triumphantly to Phnom Penh at the head of his "liberation army," their stress on his legitimacy as Cambodia's chief of state nevertheless gives them a weapon with which to curb Hanoi's ambitions in Indochina.

EXHORTATIONS

At the same time, their exhortations to the Indochinese to continue struggling mirrors their hope that both the Vietnamese Communists and the United States will be bogged down and gradually weakened by a long, inconclusive conflict.

As long as it does not threaten them, therefore, the Chinese favor a protracted Indochina war that is, in effect, their way of fighting the United States by proxy.

Division—is seen here as the most difficult.

Army sources said that Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, had stretched his available forces fairly thin in the central highlands to make troops available for the Se San River operation.

So far, enemy reaction has been limited. Last week in nearby Southeast Laos, prior to the allied thrusts, North Vietnamese troops seized the long-ignored government town and airstrip of Attopeu in what was seen here as an effort to shield the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

sawmills, MacMillan Bloedel's Somass and Alberni-Pacific plants, some 1,200 men were laid off as members of the CMSG sealed off stockpiled booms of logs with a floating picket line.

A further 100 men werre expected to be laid off at the Sooke Forest Products mill a Sooke by Friday, along with about500 men at B.C. Forest Producys two Victoria sawmills unless agreement is reached with the murchant service guild to allow logs from harbor booming grounds to betowed to the mills.

BCFP's Victoria plywood mill, served independently, hasenough log stock to run about six weeks.

The same applies to MacMillan Bloedel's Alberni plywood mill and its Alberni pulp mill.

DAY-TO-DAY BASIS

Rayonier has five logging camps other than the one at Jordan River, which will operate on day-to-day basis. The 700 men employed in them face lay-off unless logs can be delivered.

Malloch and Mosely, which has contracts to log for Pacific Logging Co. Ltd., said the 15-man camp operated at Nitinat Lake faces uncertain future, although it can stock logs for a time on the lake. It depends on tugs to carry booms through tidal narrows to the west coast.

B.C. Forest also has a camp at Port Renfrew, where 240 men are employed. They could be laid off within two weeks.

Victoria Plywood mill was expected to continue operating for about 30 days and Plumper Bay Sawmills Ltd. will be able to keep running about two weeks.

A towboat owners' spokesman said a policy of trying to man tugs with management personnel for "essential services" is being done on a limited basis because the owners are not resigning themselves to inaction.

But they have now begun to encounter "hot cargoes" which he indicated would hamper this policy.

The owners are not attempting to provide anything like normal operations, the BCTOA spokesman said.

Snuol as American bombers wiped out 90 per cent of it and a U.S. tank force rolled in unopposed. The bombers were called in after the tank column fought its way into the centre of the town Tuesday and then had to retreat.

The three fronts opened today were northeast and southwest of the Fish Hook:

1. Three thousand U.S. infantrymen of the 25th Division began moving by helicopter and armored personnel carriers westward along Route 20, 50 miles southwest of the Fish Hook.

2. South Vietnamese troops moved north out of Loc Nihn and were to link up with the U.S. 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment advancing northeast on Route 7 after capturing Snuol.

3. Helicopters landed troops of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Divison and South Vietnamese troops 23 miles north of Song Be and about 10 miles beyond the border. This is also northeast of the Fish Hook.

RESISTANCE LIGHT

First reports indicated light to moderate contact in new operations.

There was no information on the northernmost Cambodian front, west of South Vietnam's central highlands, where heavy ground fire and bad weather stalled an attempt to land two battalions by helicopter 50 miles west of Pleiku Tuesday. Only one battalion of 50 men got in Tuesday.

The sixth front is in the Parrot's Beak section of Cambodia, due west of Saigon, the southernmost front. No major action was reported.

In Phnom Penh, Reuters correspondent Ian MacKenzie reported that a Viet Cong force was locked in battle with two battalions of Cambodian troops on the west bank of the Mekong River, 25 miles southeast of the capital.

The battle was near the strategic Neak Leung ferry crossing. The east bank of the crossing was captured by guerrillas Sunday.

In Saigon, the South Vietnamese government closed all schools, advanced the nightly curfew two hours to 11 p.m. and set up police checkpoints around the city to cope with persistent unrest. The capital has had almost daily demonstrations for two months.

The Supreme Court gave President Nguyen Van Thieu a setback Tuesday night by ruling that the military court trial of National Assembly member Tran Ngoc Chau was unconstitutional. Chau was sentenced to 10 years in prison for having contacts with a North Vietnamese agent, his brother. Chau contended that Thieu framed him because of his opposition to Thieu's policies.

Protests Growing

(Times News Services)

Demonstrations on campuses across the United States continued today in protest of the extension of combat into Cambodia and the slaying of four Kent State University students Monday by National Guardsmen.

Student strikes have spread to more than 170 campuses and there are plans to extend them to more, with faculty and administrative backing in many cases.

Communists Boycott Paris Talks

PARIS (AP)—The Communist side boycotted the Vietnam peace talks today to protest American air raids on North Vietnam last weekend and U.S. military operations in Cambodia. But the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong did not break up the conference.

The North Vietnamese announced that they were postponing today's 66th meeting of the peace talks until Thursday, May 14. The regular Thursday meeting this week had been scheduled for today because this Thursday is Ascension Day, a holiday in France.

Announcing the boycott and postponement, North Vietnamese spokesman Nguyen Thanh Le told a news conference that the Nixon administration had violated a promise by the Johnson administration to stop the bombing and all other acts of war against North Vietnam. He said that instead President Nixon had intensified and extended the war.

"If the Nixon administration continues its bombardment of North Vietname," Le said, "it must bear the entire responsibility for all the grave consequences of its acts."

Oil Firm Indicted for Spill

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In the first action of its kind in the United States, a federal grand jury has indicted a major oil company on charges arising from a huge offshore oil spill.

The Chevron Oil Co. was cited Tuesday on 900 counts of willfully violating government regulations aimed at preventing pollution from oil wells drilled at sea.

Conviction on all counts could result in fines totalling $1,800,000.

In Washington, Interior Secretary Walter Hickel said enforcement of federal oil well safety rules is going to be strict. "We will be fair but we will be tough."

The grand jury said Chevron knowingly and wilfully failed to install and maintain storm chokes or similar subsurface control devices on 90 oil wells off the Louisiana coast in the Gulf of Mexico.

"We are confident that when the case is tried, we will be completely vindicated," said K. H. Shaffer of New Orleans, president of Chevron.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

A Pacific cold front will spread cloud and rain over the northern B.C. coast this afternoon but a ridge of high pressure over the south coast and B.C. interior will slow the advance of the disturbance over the province.

The Weather and You

The time when most of us long to get out in the weather, no matter whether it's cold or warm, blustery or rainy, is after we've been inside all day working in warm rooms and feeling lousy with that stuffed-up feeling.

If you feel that way and you go outside for a walk and some deep breathing, it isn't long before you begin to feel better. Your head is cleared, so to speak.

When that has happened to you, probably you were stimulated by the force of the wind against your body as you walked.

Wind acts as a sort of mechanical stimulant. The stronger the wind blows, the greater the stimulus. But when your body is in motion against the wind it doesn't experience the same degree of stimulation all over. You are stimulated more than double in the area from the chest to the top of your head than you are at the level of your knees.

MIRACLE COATING REPLACES PAINT

Another boon to the space age has been accomplished for home and apartment owners — an exterior wall coating so tough and durable it is guaranteed to totally eliminated exterior painting for over 15 years. This remarkable product combines the long-lasting properties of fiber-glass, asbestos, mica and perlite to make a wall surface that resists all climatic extremes. 16 colors available.

Guided missile manufacturers for the United States government have found this material a superior product fo insulation of heat shields used in the space program. Over 2 million world-wide applications have been made on industrial, commercial and residential buildings since 1946.

Applied with a Gun

"Fiberglass" Textured Coating is applied with heavy duty spray equipment under high pressure. It fuses itself to the wall surface to a thickness of 20 times that of paint. It remains flexible and withstands cracking and surface expansion and contraction. Every application is registered and factory-guaranteed for 15 full years against chipping, peeling or flaking.

Free information on how easily you may have "Fiberglass" Textured Coating applied now at low bank terms, with no down payment, may be obtained by calling direct or collect to Textured Coating Division:

Japanese Raping the Seas And Who Can Stop Them?

By ANTHONY PEARSON
Manchester Guardian

I climbed down into the freeze hold of the big Japanese factory ship lying in Kilindini, Mombasa Harbour, Kenya, and she was stocked high, compartment after compartment, with the biggest billfish I have ever seen.

There must have been close on two thousand billfish — black, blue, and striped marlin, broadbill swordsfish, and sailfish. The other holds were filled with yellowfin tuna, while the Japanese and Chinese catcher ships alongside continued to pile in their cargoes of fish.

All day, day after day, it continued. As one catcher left another would take its place and the tuna and swordfish went down into the freeze holds to be finally taken to Japan where a cannery would turn them into unidentifiable edible produce for the world's tables.

The experience left me feeling sick, not least from the sudden transition in shorts and light shirt from 98 degrees of heat to 40-below freezing. But the sight of those fish, many of them larger than the biggest fish any angler could reasonable dream of, was a terrifying sight, and the terror is no exaggeration.

I know that commercial fishing is necessary and desirable and that fish, a high protein food, is one of the answers to feeding the world's starving millions.

As a sportsman, my claims on fish stocks are small and unimportant, but at the same time, even though my reasons may be selfish, I recognize the need for conservation, the preservation of marine wildlife, so that I and thousands like me may be able to enjoy the sea and the excitement of hunting big fish but, more important, that the fish stocks remain balanced so that the oceans can continue to supply and meet the food problems of the world, particularly of underdeveloped countries.

The contribution of the Japanese fishing fleet towards solving the problems of world hunger is negligible. Consumer demand for their catch is high and is absorbed on the home market or else is exported to America and Europe, mostly as canned tunafish.

At the same time, the Japanese contribution towards the outright destruction of world fish stocks is very high. The Japanese are the most direct and savage threat to the complete annihilation of warm water species, and not only fish — the extinction or near-extinction of whale species in the Antarctic is almost entirely due to the uncontrolled killing of these mammals by Japanese catcher ships.

To the Japanese one fish is much the same as the next, except that some species have a higher market value than others. The suggestion that slow-growing, relatively rare fish species like marlin and broadbill swordfish should be caught objectively, so that numbers are not decimated too rapidly, amuses the Japanese.

They have fished out their home waters and those close to home, and they work on the principle that after they have fished out one area of ocean they simply move on to the next and destroy that.

Fishermen along the length of America's Pacific coast, around the Australian and New Zealand coasts, and now along the Indian Ocean coasts of Africa will testify to the wholesale slaughter and destruction by the Japanese fishing fleets.

The problem is that there is no legal means by which they can be stopped. They fish outside territorial waters and they make their factory ship base in the port of some country with no major fishing interest, preferably a country to which the Japanese government can give economic or scientific aid or negotiate a close association via trade agreements.

The centres of Japanese fishing activities at present are closely allied to non-fishing countries. There is a factory ship serving a large fleet off the coast of Kenya and another off the Canary Islands, which has one of the few unexploited fishing grounds of the Southern Atlantic.

There is still extensive fishing carried out off the coasts of Central and South America and in the Pacific off New Zealand, where local fishermen are protesting loudly against the slaughter of their billfish, without much apparent effect.

Unless you take the law into your own hands, like the Miami charter boat skippers who sailed out to the Japanese fleet armed with machine guns to blow them out of the water and who were only prevented from carrying out their threat by the intervention of the U.S. coastguard, there is no way of retaliating.

The technique of Japanese fishing is to lay down baited longlines, up to 50 miles in length and carrying thousands of baited hooks, between 40 and 400 miles offshore.

The hooks are set at varying depths and are baited with small fish, fish chunks, or squid. Species caught are mainly billfish and tuna (bluefin, yellowfin, or big eye, depanding on location) and sharks.

As the fish come aboard, their gills and fins are cut off, or, in the case of swordfish, their swords and, with sharks, their heads. Otherwise, nothing is wasted. Even the offal from sliced-out guts can be used as bait.

The fish are treated as they come aboard and in a matter of minutes are being pushed down into the freeze hold. To enforce any control on an operation of this nature is not only impractical but virtually impossible.

The secrets of Japanese catcher and factory ships are carefully guarded, and any boarding and investigation of them by outside bodies would almost literally have to be carried out at gunpoint.

Quarrels over territorial water rights have bothered the world's fishing industry for years but have tended to be localized quarrels. The Japanese have changed this, putting themselves in the role of international fishing privateers, striking wherever pickings are richest, stripping the grounds, and moving on.

Not only do they hit the world's fishing industry below the belt by their catching methods but also by their marketing techniques.

In 1966, after reaching agreement with the local authorities in the Canaries over the catching and landing of fish, the Japanese then undercut the Spanish by selling their catch on the Italian market, one of Spain's best, for half the price the Spaniards were asking, this being made possible by the extremely efficient and streamlined manner in which the Japanese fleet is operated.

Efforts by the United Nations in their Law of the Sea conferences, to reach agreement on some sort of international fisheries control have failed.

The Japanese were high on the list of dissenters, closely followed by the Russians, whose fishing techniques and total disregard for conservation make them almost allies of the Japanese and led to a Russian trawler being fired on by Australian prawn boats while fishing the Gulf of Carpentaria off the North Coast of Australia.

The inroads made by the Japanese fishing fleets into fish stocks of large game fish, billfish, and tuna, become more apparent with each new season.

On the East Coast of Africa, where the billfish grounds are among the richest in the world, the numbers of fish taken each year drop by about 30 per cent over the previous year.

There are good and bad seasons for every species of fish, but the decline of game fish in the Indian Ocean has followed an unnatural progress. In places like the Gulf of California, it has already been ruined beyond all hope of revival, and there are now grave indications that the marlin grounds of New Zealand's Bay of Islands, made famous by the writer Zane Grey and among the best marlin grounds in the world, have already been seriously affected by overfishing.

While the Japanese logic that the ocean and its fruits are there for the raping seems to satisfy the conscience of the Tokyo government and is tolerated by their American advisers, there will soon come a time, not so many years ahead, when even the Japanese will be hard-pressed to find fishing.

By then, some species will be extinct, not just in certain areas but throughout the world's oceans. Tuna are plentiful and fast-growing, like their relations the mackerel, but they can be wiped out, as proved by the bluefin stocks in the North Sea, destroyed by overfishing of German, Dutch, and Russian boats.

Marlin, sailfish,, and broadbill are slow-growing and delicate fish, easily destroyed. Their general worth as a food fish on the world market is small, unless they are processed by a factory and sold as canned tuna which often happens.

Like the blue whale, their value is more in their rare beauty than their nutritious qualities but also like the blue whale they are, in many places, already almost extinct.

What remains of the world's beautiful animals are protected in game parks. But how do you fence off the sea to protect the fish and the mammals in the same way and how do you explain the importance of it to people who see fish only as hard cash or a battered slab on a plate?

Ask Not for Whom the 'Liberty Bell' Tolls . . .

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON — In some lands children skppped around the pole celebrating the rites of spring on May Day, and in a great variety of cultures and countries millions upon millions of laboring men and women rested, for Friday was also the International Labor Day.

In the United States, however, it was Law Day. We can't observe it as workers' holiday, because there are no workers in America, only employees and personnel.

'We All Share'

We have nothing in common with the capitalist, socialist and communist societies where the day is marked by special ceremonies; we have no reason to encourage feelings of fraternity with laboring people abroad, because we don't have a working class. Here, we all share in the ownership of the factories, the railroads, the utilities, the mines and oil wells.

Law Day was begun 12 years ago by Charles S. Rhyne, when he was president of the American Bar Association, so that "on May Day when the tanks rumble through Red Square we would hold up law rather than force as the element that we admire most in our system."

You can't argue with that.

The Russian military spectacles are more depressing than our own—possibly because the Ruskies seem to march with more precision than our unenthusiastic draftees.

This year, the American Bar Association tells us, 100,000 Law Day programs were conducted; even the ABA doesn't know how many Liberty Bell Award plaques (cost $12.50 apiece) were given by local bar associations to meritorious citizens; Bob (let the soldier boys die laughing) Hope was incessantly on the air in the form of minute spots adjuring us to "uphold the law and help obtain equal justice through lawful means."

The slogan for this year's observance was "Law—Bridge to Justice" and to back it up the ABA sent out boilerplates claiming that "Last year 38,000 lawyers worked for 1,500,000 needy persons — and for justice—without cost to them."

Welcome as Cancer

But for most people lawyers and courts are still about as welcome as cancer and twice as expensive. The profession has done little to rid itself of its reputation as the rapacious servants of property, except perhaps on May Day.

Only last week, with ironic timing, an American Bar Association committee came out with a report objecting to legislation that would allow consumers to file class action suits against companies that misrepresent and sell shoddy merchandise.

The committee members all come from firms with names that sound like Pickle, Sour and Dill or Squeeze, Chisel and Gouge. The committee members have clients such as the National Canners Association, General Motors, Standard Oil of California, and Firestone Tire and Rubber. Such people would naturally prefer Law Day to May Day. It's their law.

As a bridge to justice, the law appears to many people who need its protection the most to be more of a pirate plank. The biggest and most important law decision of our time, the school desegregation case, is still unenforced, while the president, a lawyer himself, gives free legal advice on the television to help people detour around the bridge.

It is for this reason that Yale University is up in arms. Many of them in New Haven don't believe that a Black Panther can get a fair trial.

Maybe they're wrong, but they've lost faith in the law courts. To show it, they've gone on strike and spent the weekend demonstrating. This will earn them a lot of criticism from the editorial pages where every year there is a dutifully printed piece in praise of Law Day.

Just Learning

The poor who've had plenty of experience with law in night court and with repossessing baliffs have never believed that the law was a bridge to any place they cared to go, but the middle class whites are just learning.

On this Law Day, blacks, students and younger teachers were not the only ones who have reason to reflect about what's at the other end of Bob Hope's bridge. More and more union members gulping to keep the inflationary waters out of their noses must wonder about the increasing use of the law to keep them at work and not striking.

As of now the law is being used principally against government workers, but recently George Meany suggested that labor contracts be concluded without ratification of the rank and file membership.

Judging from what's happening in the trucking industry, it is entirely possible that we will next see the labor bosses and the boss bosses going to the law courts in partnership to secure forcing the workers . . . pardon me . . . forcing the personnel to stay coupled to their machines like industrial villeins.

If this should strike you as peculiar, remember that the law, in the words of Bob (White House) Hope "is the key to promoting unity or purpose in our national life."

Students and the Long Haul

By ART STOTT

Down the Strait, white water curling from her bow, the towboat without tow beat against the evening wind, heading home. It could be a long lay-over. We watched from shore and thought of all the other tugs at their berths, or seeking them, and wondered when we'd see the patient work-horses again dragging their booms or barges across the mouth of the bay and what the tie-up would mean in summer jobs.

Stott

Without tugs to shift the logs, work in the woods could grind to a halt even without strikes in the forest industry itself. And seasonal work being particularly important to them, we speculated on the prospects of university students who must earn in the next four months enough to carry them through next year's studies. The outlook did not seem bright.

Manpower on campus at Gordon Head reserves judgment at this time. Officials there do not expect to determine the work trend this summer for another week or two, possibly more. But in Parliament last week a member noted March unemployment statistics revealing that nearly 40 per cent of the unemployed in Canada are under age 25. Youth obviously is going to have a harder time landing something than in earlier years.

Instant employment is available for only a portion of the young men and women who rose from writing examinations in the last few days and walked onto the labor market. At this date, it looks as if a substantial number of them will be dependent on student loan plans, provincial bursaries and other assistance. The process, perhaps more efficient now, carries a means test that isn't going to be whole-heartedly approved either by students or their parents. But the picture is not as dark as some think.

A student with a 65 per cent or better average on high school matriculation, or after first year college, shouldn't be excluded even if parents cannot contribute significantly to his or her needs. At the same time, parents in comfortable circumstances will be under greater pressure to provide help.

The Canadian Student Loan Plan has reportedly been slightly eased through government recognition of the impact of inflation on undergraduates. It is possible to borrow up to $1,000 a year, under that scheme, with interest charges of 8¾ per cent and repayment deferred up to 10 years from the date of the first loan. In addition, bursary assistance is available, on proof of student qualifications, from the province, and scholarships are given for those of exceptional attainment in their studies.

University authorities here figure the cost of an out-of-town student at between $1700 and $1900 per university year. That includes $100 to $200 for books, $460 for fees, $800 for residence, $150 for transportation to and from home during the year and from $250 to $300 for incidentals.

If there ever was a gravy train for students seeking outside assistance, it seems to have been derailed, but the track for the conscientious has not been cut.

The means test involves an assessment of parental ability to help. That is based on income returns from the preceding year. The family head, for instance, may be induced to take on the student's loan, guaranteeing interest if not repayment. Moreover, where the student lives at home, the residential costs may be minimized. The purpose, it is explained, is to make funds available for the serious student coming to the university from out-of-town.

There will be problems for those high school matriculants who want to go to university, who have booted things around in high school and, in consequence, grade lower than 65 per cent when they leave secondary school. If their parents can carry them, and if their qualifications are adequate, they can still go to university, but low grading in high school reflects on the seriousness of their approach, or on their ability to handle the work there.

These are factors that come into sharper focus as the gates to summer employment narrow during periods of austerity and dislocation. The university's concern centres more sharply on the serious, competent young person who, through no fault of his own, hasn't found summer work or derived from it enough money to keep him from September to the end of April.

The consequences may be less pleasant than in times of easy earning for the young, but the experience is educational in a way not always found in the lecture room.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, MAY 6, 1970 —PAGE 17

Three Hours of Budget Agonizing and Not a Cent Cut

By JIM HUME

Victoria city council grumbled its way through close to three hours of budget debate this morning.

But at noon it still hadn't reduced a proposed operating budget of $21.1 million by so much as a cent.

Council is already committed to striking the mill rate at 37.5 for the general levy and to a slight reduction in residential taxes.

Treasurer James Bramley reminded council of its pre-capital budget vote promise this morning but pointed out that their endorsation of the mill rate did not mean they had to accept detailed expenditures.

"I would (therefore) recommend that any increases or decreases that you would care to make in the budget be made through or within the limitations of the contingency provisions," Bramley said.

But though council prodded, probed and complained about staff increases and rising costs, it was unable to come up with specific ideas to save money on the 1970 operation.

Ald. Tom Christie touched off the longest debate of the morning when he queried the number of staff members in the city's community planning department.

Informed that there were eight members and one yet to be hired to replace a former staff member, Christie wanted to know if the staff couldn't be held at the reduced number.

Total budget for community planning this year has been set at $98,300.

"Do we have to have this staff?" asked Christie.

Mayor Courtney Haddock said he felt the question justified and suggested that with the capital budget now out of the way a full revue of all departments with view to money saving should take place.

As chairman of the police commission Haddock was later to ask for four more full-time police, the largest staff increase proposal in the city for 1970.

Haddock said if the city was run like a business the "bank would just say you've got so many dollars to operate on and you would cut your cloth accordingly."

He said he also wondered just what the planning department was doing.

"At first we had some major projects like the waterfront but that's all finished now as far as planning goes," he said.

"I just wonder what they're doing now."

He was quickly told by Ald. Harold Olafson and city manager Dennis Young who listed a string of projects still under way and vital to the city's growth.

Young also stressed that the planning department was not adding an extra man this year, merely replacing a planner who left the city recently to work for the regional district.

"In a growing city the problem is not how do you increase your staff, but how do you contain it," Young said. "You are seeing the results of a city's growth in services."

Ald. Peter Pollen said he appreciated the manager's point of view but noted that a more than 10 per cent increase in total budget for one department took some justification.

And he added that in his opinion the civic civil servant was rapidly "becoming the elite of the population."

It wasn't just the planners who came under fire.

Up on the rack for a few minutes was the Victoria fire department which last year logged 524 days off in sick time accoriding to Pollen.

"Somebody has to sit down and ask just what's going on?" Pollen said. "And I don't think anybody is doing that right now."

Haddock agreed that it was time the city sat down and examined its policies and its goals.

Both the mayor and Pollen denied that they were talking staff cuts. But Pollen at one point in the debate noted that "not a major business in this city hasn't cut staff substantially."

Pollen took several sharp swings at the now approved capital budget (the city's five-year $6.3 million play endorsed last Thursday).

"I didn't say anything before, but while we have approved this fire training centre (part of the capital program) in good faith I think it's time we started looking at the possibility of regional fire departments and regional police departments."

Later in this morning session Ald. Harold Olafson made a formal motion that the department of municipal affairs be approached with the view to amalgamating police and fire.

No vote had been taken at noon although the suggestion appeared to meet with general approval.

Saanich to Carry Out Management Reform

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Saanich council has agreed to revamp the senior municipal administration and appoint a municipal administrator.

The changes were approved by council at a closed-door meeting following Monday night's regular council meeting. Details were relayed to the 25 to 30 senior staff involved at a meeting Tuesday afternoon in the municipal hall.

Introduction of the administrator is the key change, representing a compromise between the municipal manager form of local government, in effect in Victoria, and the more common council-committee system.

Saanich will retain the council-committee system and the present structure of committees is unchanged.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said this morning the council-committee system has allowed Saanich to develop rapidly while retaining control of operations in the hands of elected representatives.

"Following intensive study and discussion of alternative management approaches, council has decided to retain a form of council-committee government but to achieve greater co-ordination of departmental operations through the use of a municipal administrator," he said.

ULTIMATE CONTROL

"Ultimate control of operations will continue to be exercised by council."

The position will be posted within the municipal hall and advertised externally "at an early date."

Curtis said the administrator will have the right to dismiss junior staff and suspend senior staff for cause, but this must be reviewed by council at its next meeting.

Other changes agreed to council include:

Setting up four positions (already in existence) below the municipal administrator, who himself is under council, excepting the positions of clerk, personnel director and the yet-to-be approved full-time solicitor.

MAJOR CHANGE

These four positions are planner, engineer, comptroller-treasurer and assessor.

The major change here is placing the fire chief and his department under engineering. Previously, it was loosely under the comptroller-treasurer although largely on its own.

Curtis said the change will "Achieve greater co-ordination."

Dropped from the engineering department and established on it's own is the planner and his deaprtment.

Curtis said this was in effect what has already happened, "although on paper it was under the engineering department."

UNDER STUDY

There is no change in the police department, which will continue to report at first to the police commission.

Curtis said council has not made a decision about a full-time solicitor, although agreeing this was a recommendation of a firm of consultants. It was still under study.

It was expected that a municipal manager system would not be introduced, although it was considered early in the over-all study. Last March it was disclosed by Curtis that this system was not being contemplated.

The changes stem from a study of senior administration by a firm of management consultants, Kates, Peat, Marwick and Company.

The firm was hired by council last November. The decision followed by two months publication in the Daily Times of some staff complaints, among them workload.

Reason for the study included the fact that the basic administrative structure was unchanged for 15 years, that three senior staff are nearing retirement and tremendous population growth. Staff complaints, it was stated last November, were "part of it."

Curtis said today that "no final report has been handed to us" although he said there is "a written document."

The decisions by council Monday night "represent some major decisions agreed on." The work of Kates Peat was not completed — there was still to be done a job-content and salary review for senior staff.

Court Ruling Doesn't Waver Old Flag Man

It takes more than a B.C. Supreme Court ruling to down George Burnham.

Burnham, champion of the Red Ensign, lost the first round in his fight to bring down Canada's Maple Leaf flag in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday, but he says he's already going strong for the second round.

Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan of the B.C. Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that Burnham had no right to seek an injunction restraining and prohibiting the use of the Maple Leaf flag and a declaration that the 1965 proclamation of the flag is not legally binding on him.

'NOT ALLOWED'

Burnham said he lost this round because he engaged a lawyer.

"I was not allowed to speak, I was not allowed to say anything in court because I engaged a lawyer. My views were not taken at all," he said.

So now Burnham, who has been fighting to retain the Red Ensign as Canada's national flag since 1965, says he will take his case to criminal court and warns that this time he will be more severe than before.

"Now I'm taking criminal action against former Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson, the Hon. John Turner, Minister of Justice, and the Hon. Pierre Elliott Trudeau — and I'm taking this action right away," Burnham said.

Burnham said his case has to work out this time.

"The flag is exhibit number one. It must be taken down and put into custody. The Red Ensign will have to go up because it is the national flag of Canada."

Spiny Beasties

Their official title is Echinoidea, but colloquially speaking they're just spiny sea urchins, which get their impressive Latin name for a distinct similarity with the European hedgehog. Diver David Sadler, 16, of 8590 Emard Terrace, picked up these specimens off the Ogden Point breakwater. He's holding them gingerly because the spines are poisonous—a good thing to remember if you ever bump into one.

Woman Wins Board Appeal Against Welfare

By PETER McNELLY

A provincial welfare appeal board Tuesday overruled a Victoria welfare department decision which denied a city woman's request for home care of her crippled husband.

The decision, subject to final approval by provincial social welfare director J. A. Sadler, will give the family needed assistance at home and the mother time to find part-time work.

Many welfare recipients believe they have no recourse beyond the decisions of social workers and welfare administrators, but appeals are quite possible under the provincial Social Assistance Act.

Tuesday's hearing, for example, was set up after the provincial welfare department received a written request from the woman for a hearing on the Victoria welfare department's decision.

Then, the regional welfare director for Vancouver Island, J. A. Molberg, set up an appeal board consisting of himself and two others. A hearing date was set.

TWO RESIDENTS

Appeal boards here are composed of the regional welfare director and two city residents, usually public health nurses, Family and Children's Service social workers, doctors or city officials. The welfare department may call to the hearing other persons who are familiar with the background of the case.

HEART ATTACK

A person appealing a decision may bring anyone he wishes to assist the presentation of his cae. Often, the Low Income Group is called in on appeals by welfare recipients.

The recipient has the right to request only himself and the board be present at the hearing.

Provincial and city welfare officials would not discuss details of Tuesday's hearing, but the woman said she was appealing in order to keep her family together.

Her husband has been unemployed a year since suffering a heart attack. After the attack he developed multiple sclerosis and will never work again. He had been a bridge builder with the CNR for 19 years.

USUAL PROCEDURE

She said Victoria's welfare department had offered to place her husband in a nursing home at a cost of between $220 and $280 a month. Her request that city welfare pay the cost of having a male orderly care for her husband at home was denied, she said.

Molberg said appeals are not common and Low Income Group president Walter Olszewski agreed. Olszewski said he did not trust the appeal system because the board's decision can be overruled by the welfare minister and board members do not represent the poor.

CUBAN SHIP IN PORT

The 16,000-ton Cuban freighter Sierra Maestra came into the Esquimalt Graving Dock this morning to take on a load of eight used Canadian Pacific Railway cars.

The surplus steel cars are part of a large shipment sold to Cuba to help build up the country's transportation facilities.

Shipping agent George Dawson estimates the number to be between 150 and 180.

Also aboard the ship is 12,000 tons of ammonia sulphide for fertilizer, taken on in Japan prior to the ship's departure April 22.

The ship carries a crew of 50 and nine passengers. The passengers on this trip are architects and technicians who have been at Osaka five months, overseeing the building of the Cuban pavilion at Expo 70.

The Sierra Maestra leaves Victoria late Thursday, bound for Havana.

Allowance Cheques Sent Early

The Victoria post office has already received from the treasury board all family allowance, youth allowance, old age pension and social security cheques for early delivery this month in anticipation of a national postal strike.

The national Council of Postal Unions has called for a strike vote May 19.

Early delivery of the cheques, some of which were not due to arrive at the post office for another two weeks, has angered local postal workers.

Ken Darlington, president of the Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers said the treasury board's action "indicates a degree of collusion between the treasury board and the post office."

"This is a very transparent effort to anticipate criticism for non-delivery of these cheques in the tvent of a strike," he said.

The Victoria branches of the Letter Carriers Union and the Postal Workers Union have formed a joint strike council.

THE WAR IN SOUTHEAST Asia has run up a tidy casualty list on an Ohio campus. Four students shot dead; others wounded by rifle fire or bayonet thrust. Those fierce old wafflers so eager for youth's blood to be shed may be well-satisfied with that visitation of law and order, Republican style. But I hope to God that Americans of conscience in a land founded on protest will cry out against this latest departure by their country from greatness.

The killing of Americans by Americans at Kent is yet another episode in a story that began badly and threatens to end in disaster.

A foreign war which the United States should never have entered, let alone expanded, has come home to roost. And it's most unlikely that what is happening down there will be averted by presidential warnings that dissent carried to violence invites tragedy.

It's late for such platitudes. Young people more than ever convinced that their country's course must be altered won't listen to them.

I expect that fact will be driven home by more and perhaps bloodier confrontations before this ominous year has proceeded much farther.

Dissent carried to violence conveys a warning and demands a cure. For the United States, the remedy is the speediest possible withdrawal from Indo-China, and concentration on domestic problems too long neglected.

Meanwhile, Kent has given martyrs to what some Americans now call the youth revolution. How long until that revolution approaches civil war?

MR. AND MRS. MALCOLM McSorley live in a colonial house at 2100 Munn Road. Their 36-acre tract begins at the Saanich border line and extends back through unorganized territory into the Highlands.

They built the house themselves, with help from a son now 16 years old. Until they learned what B.C. Hydro had in store for them, they were happy in the country.

"But a while ago," says Christina McSorley, "we were told that Hydro means to run an overhead line the length of our place. They want an easement 240 feet wide for their towers, and those towers will go straight up the mountain slope that forms part of our property."

It's a hill, actually, logged of its timber 20 years ago, but grown up in second growth. And it figures in a view which the McSorleys prize.

Naturally, B.C. Hydro would pay for this long, broad intrusion upon their acreage. However, they haven't the slightest wish to sell.

"It's heart-breaking even to think about," Mrs. McSorley said. "This is the place where we want to be, and we'll fight as well as we can. But it's like butting your head against a stone wall.

"We don't want their money or their towers. We've told them we'll give them the easement if they'll put their line underground where it belongs. In 10 or 20 years, I'm sure they'd have to do that anyway."

Malcolm McSorley, a manufacturer originally from Montreal, spent time in Victoria during the Korean war.

Later, the family moved to California, but McSorley remembered the Saanich Peninsula as an ideal area in which to make a home. So in 1964, they came up to buy their acres, build the house, and settle in.

They realize that power must be supplied where needed. It's the manner of the doing that appals them.

"Right now," Mrs. McSorley concluded, "it's starting with us. But others out here won't escape. This whole area will be a spider-web of overhead lines from a B.C. Hydro power station."

A slight exageration perhaps, but the lady was understandably emphatic. Also, she has a point. Those lines should go underground . . . and better now than later.

THE TIDES ARE LOW these mornings, and at the rim of sand flats laid bare as they rarely are, the seagulls find good pickings. Prominent on their menu are the little red rock crabs, their shells only two or three inches across, whose parade ground lies exposed.

Sharp eyes spot them. A flip of a beak turns them wrongside-up with claws and pincers waving ineffectually. Then the noisy, greedy feast begins, to end with a carapace scooped hollow, and a gull or two a little less hungry than before.

But only a little. Seagulls, as we've observed them, are everlastingly famished!

U.S. OFFICIAL COMING

Nerve Gas Briefing Slated

An official from Washington State will join provincial civil defence personnel here Friday for a briefing from the federal Emergency Measures Organization on shipment of nerve gas through Juan de Fuca Strait.

The meeting, closed to the press, will be held at 11:30 a.m. or noon in the training section of Provincial Civil Defence headquarters, 506 Government, said provincial co-ordinator John Erb.

While the briefing will deal with classified information, he said representatives of various organizations involved will speak with reporters later.

"If there is anything to add I'm sure we will—although it just could be we won't have anything new to announce."

No shipping date for nerve gas has yet been announced by the U.S. Army. Civil defence officials have been promised 28 days' notice before any shipment is made.

STUDENTS JUDGE CHICKEN RECIPES

Senior home economics students at three local schools prepared and judged chicken recipes sent in to a contest sponsored by the B.C. broiler marketing board. Testing for flavor are these Reynolds Road students, Bev Turner, centre, and Dianne Bainbridge, right, as their teacher, Miss Barbara Armstrong, makes notes of their reactions. Other points taken into account in choosing winners were originality, appearance and practicality. Students at Mount Douglas and Esquimalt senior secondary schools also helped choose the winning entries, which will be announced May 15. (Irving Strickland Photo.)

All-Woman Finance Program Geared to Fill Special Needs

EDMONTON (CP) — A financial program created solely for women by women is under way in Edmonton.

In fact, Financial Independence Plan, a division of Financial Life Assurance Co., now is training the first all-woman field force in the insurance industry in North America, said Norma Worton, director of the program.

The basis for the program began last May, Mrs. Worton said. Dr. A. G. Perroni of the University of Alberta department of business administration met with a group of Alberta women to discuss the kind of insurance women want and need.

"The women stated they didn't want just straight life insurance, but insurance with protection while their families are growing up, plus an investment scheme," said Mrs. Worton.

Dr. Perroni approached Financial Life Assurance with his data and Mrs. Worton took over and developed a plan.

The result is Financial Independence Plan, which is divided into two major segments—investment and insurance, Mrs. Worton said.

The investment portfolio focuses on a "buy Canada back" aspect. Fifty per cent of the annual premium goes into an equity fund that invests in blue-chip common stock of Canadian - owned companies, she said.

The insurance plan offers an immediate cash outlay for the woman's funeral expenses and a monthly cheque for the dependents paid until the woman would have reached the age of 50. There are other benefits, too, she said.

"If 10,000 Alberta women buy this plan, in 10 years we will control $60,000,000 of the Canadian economy," Mrs. Worton said.

The program now is working with the university's placement office to employ female students for the summer months to help market the plan.

Jubilee Auxiliary Plans Coffee Party

The Woman's Auxiliary to the Royal Jubilee Hospital will hold their annual spring coffee party Thursday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the nurses' residence. The party, convened by Mrs. W. R. Jeffs, will feature sale tables of gifts and superfluities as well as a raffle and door prizes.

Couple to Mark Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. George Roberts, 1410 Elford Street, will travel to Winnipeg Saturday, May 16, to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary at a family reunion.

The couple were married in Winnipeg May 19, 1920 at the home of a friend, Mrs. R. Griffiths, now a resident of Vancouver.

An open house in their honor will be held in Winnipeg at the home of their eldest son. Families will travel from Montreal, the North West Territories, Thunder Bay and Victoria to be reunited for the first time in 15 years.

Before leaving, Mr. and Mrs. Roberts will be honored at a reception by their Victoria friends. The reception will be held Sunday between 2 and 4 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Roberts, 611 Ralph Street.

CALGARY CAC MEMBER ADVISES:

Baby Happy With Love and the Basics

OTTAWA (CP) — It is not necessary to spend a great deal of money on a baby, Valeria Zacharias, president of the Calgary Consumers' Association, says in an article on baby needs in the publication Canadian Consumer.

"He needs a mother's time and love but he is as happy with clothing and equipment that meets minimum standards as he would be with the most expensive that could be bought," she says.

Mrs. Zacharias, who is careful to state that the doctor should have the final say on baby's requirements, reminds prospective mothers that the basic aim is always to keep the baby comfortable and happy.

"Another suggestion is to stick to the basics in any buying done before the birth, since you don't know how big the baby will be or what you will receive as gifts.

"Many purchases may be delayed for months, and a delay gives you time to decide your preferences and to spend gradually rather than ruin your budget."

Mrs. Zacharias says second-hand items are often a good buy, since babies may outgrow their equipment before it is worn out.

If such equipment is repainted, lead-free paint should be used because ordinary paint is poisonous and may be harmful if the baby chews on it.

General hints on clothing include that it should be easy to put on and take off, machine-washable and dryable, and require no ironing.

Along with detailed information on clothing, sleeping and feeding equipment and advice on bathing and changing the baby, Mrs. Zacharias has buying suggestions for such items as high chair and playpens.

She says that a good second-hand carriage, for example, is better than a poor new one.

"Make sure there is a good brake and that there is actually spring suspension rather than just a mock-up of it. Wheels should be strong and the frame should be sturdy.

"The carriage should fold up easily for car transport, and if the carriage-bed doubles as a car-bed, the baby can stay in it without being disturbed."

Although she says that a carriage which converts to a stroller and a car-bed can be handy, she warns that equipment which has too many uses may prove somewhat of a nuisance.

The carriage should be easy to push and big enough for the baby as he grows, yet small enough to fit into a car and whatever space is available for it in the home.

Women Needed On School Board Says Trustee

COQUITLAM (CP) — Bernice Gilmore believes more women, especially school teachers, should seek election to local school boards.

A former teacher herself, she was elected to the school board in this Vancouver suburb first in 1967 and again in 1969.

"I wanted to be on the school board because I felt I had a contribution to make," she said in an interview. "I had seen education from the teacher's point of view and it's important to have that point of view expressed."

Her work doesn't stop with the school board. The mother of three and wife of a Coquitlam alderman is also a member of a trustee-teacher liaison committee launched to improve communications.

"We discuss mutual problems and exchange information," she said. "There is much less misunderstanding if we sit and talk things over.

"The public tends to think we meet only for salary negotiations in the fall."

She and another woman board member also visit one of the 34 schools in the district each week.

"Women are not tied down in the daytime like men and can do something like this," she said. "It is unfortunate there are not more women school trustees.

"They are vitally concerned with education and cangive a lot to it."

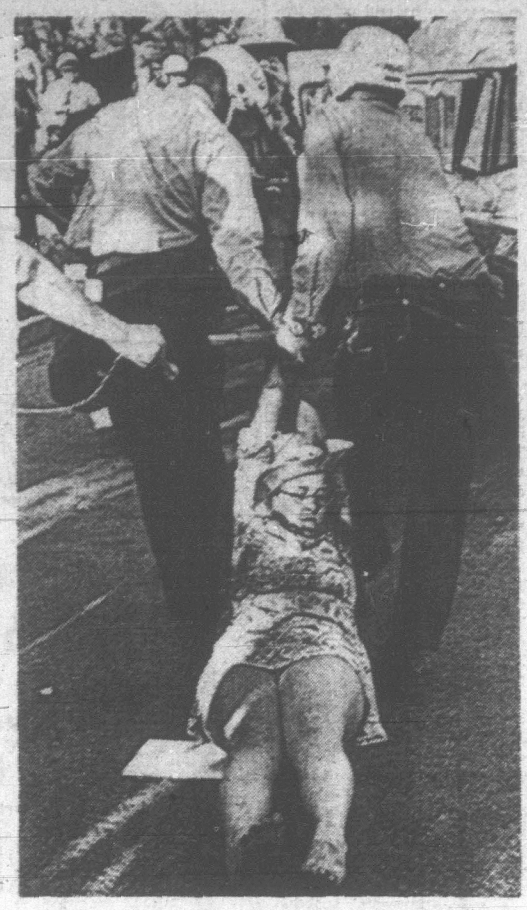
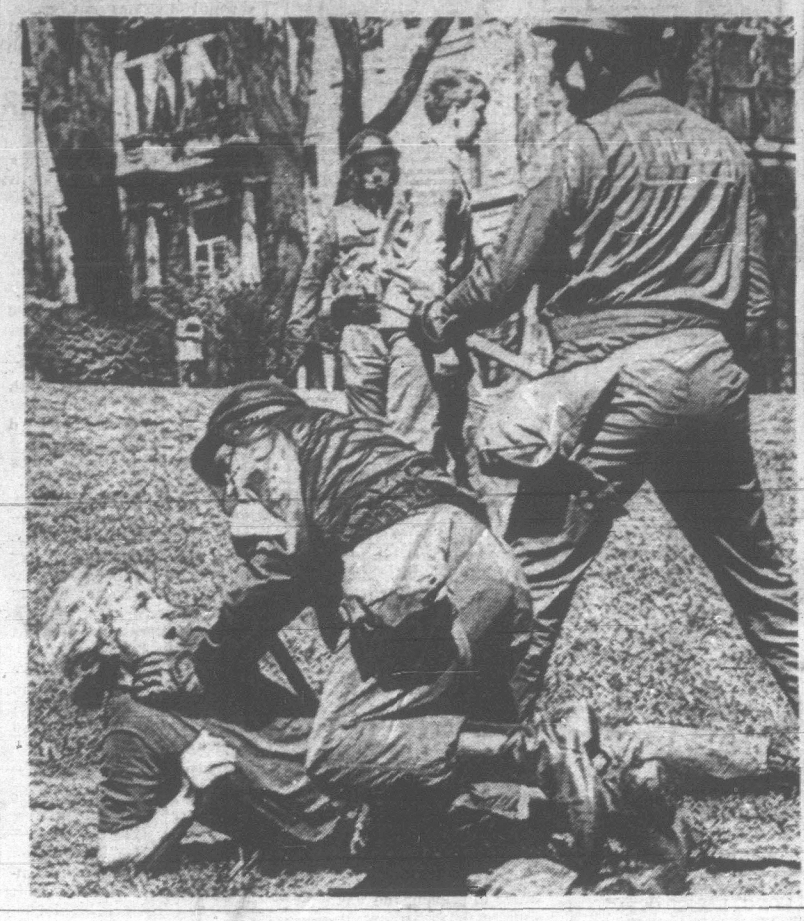
Wave of Violence Sweeps U.S. as Protests Grow





OUCH! That's the predominant word heard across the northern section of the United States Tuesday as protests against U.S. involvement in Cambodia and against the deaths of four students at Kent, Ohio, gained momentum. AT LEFT—A motorcyclist, caught in a traffic jam in Mankata, Minn., decided prone protesters wouldn't stop him from his appointed destination. Royal Columbian Takeover Hinted

By DON VIPOND

The board of management of New Westminster's Royal Columbian Hospital holds its regular meeting tonight with a startling additional item on the agenda.

It's Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's statement on a radio hot line show Tuesday night that he is considering recommending to the cabinet that the government take over administration of Royal Columbian because of "mismanagement" by the administration.

If the government did appoint a public administrator, it would be an unprecedented move made possible by legislation passed at the last session

J. W. S. Biggs, the hospital board's chairman, told the Times from Vancouver today he didn't see how health care for the area could be assisted by a government takeover of administration.

He said the board would consider certain requests from Loffmark at its meeting tonight and make a statement on the situation Thursday.

'SINGLED OUT'

"Apparently Mr. Loffmark feels we are to be singled out as the glaring example of mismanagement," Biggs said.

The health minister said Tuesday night that administrative costs at Royal Columbian are out of line with those at Vancouver General Hospital. He added he had no quarrel with a recent wage settlement for staff members or medical employees.

Hospitals in B.C. are run by boards which have provincial government and municipal representation. There are 14 members on the board of the 445-bed Royal Columbian. The hospital was founded in 1862.

NOT FIRST TIME

It's not the first time the hospital and health minister have clashed.

Last June 63 doctors using the hospital took a day off to picket the Legislature and press Loffmark on expansion plans for the hospital.

The doctors argued they were working under 19th century conditions and the hospital was "one of the worst in Canada."

RENOVATIONS

Subsequently a major renovation program was approved which will cost about $10 million and see the hospital's 1912 wing replaced, a wing built in 1950 updated and more beds and services added.

A month ago Loffmark culminated a series of warnings on soaring hospital operating costs by announcing that the British Columbia Insurance Service, the agency overseeing hospital function, would provide the money for only 70 per cent of salary increases granted hospital staffs this year.

Court Action Sought To Keep Logs Moving

Forest giant MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. plans a B.C. Supreme Court action Thursday morning to keep its mill and logging divisions operating in the face of a coastal towboat strike and refusal of its employees to handle "hot" cargoes.

The company said applications for injunctions would be heard at 10:30 a.m. to require International Woodworkers of America Local 1-80 at Duncan and Canadian Merchant Service Guild officers and members to stop interfering with production at M-B Chemainus sawmill and logging divisions.

If successful, the company said, the injunctions would restore normal operations to M-B units where IWA boatmen have refused to handle logs destined for mills.

SIX CURTAILED

There have been curtailments at six M-B operations. Besides the two at Chemainus, there have been interruptions at Kitimat and Cameron Lake logging divisions and at Somass and Alberni Pacific sawmill divisions.

Court registry officers in Victoria, Duncan and Nanaimo reported they have yet to receive applications for injunctions against unions involved in the three-day-old strike.

Spokesmen for towboat companies and major timber companies said Tuesday they would flood courts with applications for injunctions against members of the International Woodworkers of America and the Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

About 450 men were laid off at the MacMillan Bloedel Chemainus sawmill Monday when IWA boom crews refused to handle logs ordinarily handled by CMSG crews.

At Port Alberni Tuesday crews of 12 "dozer boats" operated by IWA members refused to enter a log storage area, causing shutdown of two large sawmills.

By today an estimated 1,035 men at Island milling and logging operations had been laid off as a result of the Merchant Service Guild strike

Reds Launch Viet Offensive

Viet Troops May Stay

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—South Vietnamese troops may be in Cambodia to stay, according to a Pentagon source here.

When the Americans come out at the end of June—President Nixon's deadline—the Vietnamese forces will remain indefinitely in the Parrot's Beak area.

The source said American troops may leave Cambodia well ahead of the deadline date, possibly by the end of May, if the search and destroy operations are concluded.

RAINING

Weather conditions could be a factor controlling the American troop withdrawal. Unexpected scattered rains have already started to fall, preceding the onset of the normal Southeast Monsoon season due later this month.

Sources reported that plans now under consideration call for new forays against Communist sanctuaries in Cambodia as well as the use of small numbers of Thai troops in Northern Cambodia and Southern Laos.

Of the first three allied attacks into Cambodia—three new spearheads developed Tuesday night—the Se San River operation—involving the two-brigade 4th U.S. Division and the 22nd ARVN (Army of the Republic of Vietnam)

CIVIL UNREST HITS SAIGON

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government moved four battalions of troops into Saigon today as a precaution against growing civil unrest in the capital.

Earlier, soldiers burst into the national pagoda in Saigon and opened fire on about 600 monks, nuns and students occupying the building, a South Vietnamese spokesman said. Ten were reported killed in the incident.

40 Americans Killed In Major Actions

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. and South Vietnamese forces opened three new fronts inside Cambodia today, but in Vietnam the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese launched attacks that killed 40 Americans and wounded 84, the U.S. command reported.

One North Vietnamese attack, on an artillery base south of the demilitarized zone, killed 29 Americans, the largest American toll in a single action in 20 months.

Thirty more Americans from the 101st Airborne Division were reported wounded in the attack on the artillery base 16 miles south of the DMZ. Initial reports said 15 North Vietnamese were killed.

While a heavy mortar barrage pinned down the U.S. troops, the North Vietnamese hit the base firing rocket grenades and rifles.

Sharp fighting and terror attacks were reported at several other points in the northern provinces, with six more Americans and 15 guerrillas killed. A grenade thrown into a police station in Da Nang killed six Vietnamese policemen and wounded six.

CONCENTRATE ON NORTH

The North Vietnamese appeared to be putting most of their retaliatory effort into the northern provinces. U.S. officials claim the operations in Cambodia have disrupted Communist supply lines to the south of South Vietnam.

Thousands more American and South Vietnamese troops crossed into Cambodia in the biggest offensive of the war.

Informed sources said between 20,000 and 25,000 American troops and about an equal number of South Vietnamese now are hunting North Vietnamese and Viet Cong base camps in Cambodia at six points along 250 miles of the border.

The Southern allied commands claimed more than 2,500 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed, most of them by air strikes, since the first offensive was launched Thursday. Thousands of tons of arms, ammunition, other military equipment and food have been captured or destroyed, headquarters said.

But they still have not located the Communist headquarters reported to be in Cambodia..

Incomplete reports put Southern allied casualities at 17 Americans and 170 South Vietnamese troops killed and 61 U.S. and 651 South Vietnamese troops wounded.

NATIONAL GUARD 'TRIGGER-HAPPY'

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Senator Stephen Young (Dem.-Ohio) said today the fatal shooting of four students at Kent State University Monday was touched off when an Ohio national guardsman accidentally fired his rifle after being struck by a tear-gas canister.

Other national guardsmen opened fire on students, he added.

"There was no sniper," the senator said after receiving reports on the incident from two staff members in Kent, Ohio.

Young said that during the confrontation a student apparently hurled back at the advancing guardsmen a canister still partly filled with tear gas, which had been lobbed at the students by the troops.

He said the canister struck a guardsmen on the shoulder or upper arm "and his gun fired accidentally."

Other guardsmen "then fired instantly," Young said.

He said that, based on reports from two of his aides who went to the scene, he is convinced no order was given to troops to open fire.

They were "just trigger-happy national guardsmen."

Nixon Orders Ohio Probe

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Nixon has ordered a full-scale investigation by the justice department into the fatal shooting of four Kent State University students by Ohio national guardsmen Monday.

Nixon's call for a complete probe was disclosed by the White House after he met today with six young male students from Kent State.

Rail Crossing Smash Kills Eight in Spokane

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A mother and seven of her children died today in the collision of their station wagon and a freight train as she drove the children to school.

An eighth child survived the shattering impact of the Burlington Northern freight train with the automobile at a grade crossing in the Spokane Valley just east of here.

Killed were Katherine Lorraine Krank, 36, and her children Rhonda, 17, Audrey, 16, Kenneth, 14, Dana, 13, David, 11, and twin girls, Anita and Barbara, 6.

The injured girl, reported in serious condition in hospital, was identified as Carla, 8.

Police said the car was northbound and the 53-car freight was westbound, when the engine of the train struck the loaded station wagon.

A track supervisor for Burlington Northern who witnessed the collision said the car never hesitated before pulling onto the tracks in front of the train.

There was a crossbar marking the grade crossing but no blinking light.

Chinese Seek Long Conflict

(Analysis)

HONG KONG (WP) — Peking's decision Tuesday to break relations with the Phnom Penh regime and recognize Prince Norodom Sihanouks government-in exile — nearly two months after his ouster — suggests that the Chinese welcome a worsening situation in the Indochina region.

Over the long term, the Chinese use of Sihanouk is consistent with their efforts to promote a divided Indochina in order to prevent the Vietnamese Communists from becoming dominant in the area.

For the dream of China's rulers over the centuries has been a Southeast Asia that is compliant with their wishes if not actually under their hegemony.

As far back as 1954, at the Geneva Conference that ended the French war in Indochina, Chinese premier Chou En-Lai defended Sihanouk against North Vietnamese demands that their own proteges be included in the Cambodian delegation.

ASSURANCES

On several occasions since then, Sihanouk has claimed to have had assurances from the Chinese that they would protect Cambodia against Hanoi.

While the Chinese cannot really think that the prince will return triumphantly to Phnom Penh at the head of his "liberation army," their stress on his legitimacy as Cambodia's chief of state nevertheless gives them a weapon with which to curb Hanoi's ambitions in Indochina.

EXHORTATIONS

At the same time, their exhortations to the Indochinese to continue struggling mirrors their hope that both the Vietnamese Communists and the United States will be bogged down and gradually weakened by a long, inconclusive conflict.

As long as it does not threaten them, therefore, the Chinese favor a protracted Indochina war that is, in effect, their way of fighting the United States by proxy.

Division—is seen here as the most difficult.

Army sources said that Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, had stretched his available forces fairly thin in the central highlands to make troops available for the Se San River operation.

So far, enemy reaction has been limited. Last week in nearby Southeast Laos, prior to the allied thrusts, North Vietnamese troops seized the long-ignored government town and airstrip of Attopeu in what was seen here as an effort to shield the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

Ex-MP Cleared

against the B.C. Towboat Owners' Association.

As of today mills affected included Butler Bros. Logging at Sooke (85 men), Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber Co. at Jordan River (80), Rayonier Canada (B.C.) Ltd. at Jordan River (90), Cooke Forest Products Ltd. Goodridge mill at Sooke (250), B.C. Forest Products Ltd. Point Ellice and Victoria sawmill divisions cut graveyard shifts, Malloch and Mosely Logging at Alta Lake (50), with about 30 more expected at Muir Creek by the weekend, and MacMillan Bloedel logging at China Creek, Alberni Inlet (35).

At Port Alberni Tuesday two of the province's biggest sawmills, MacMillan Bloedel's Somass and Alberni-Pacific plants, some 1,200 men were laid off as members of the CMSG sealed off stockpiled booms of logs with a floating picket line.

A further 100 men were expected to be laid off at the Sooke Forest Products mill at Sooke by Friday, along with about 500 men at B.C. Forest Producys two Victoria sawmills unless agreement is reached with the merchant service guild to allow logs from harbor booming grounds to be towed to the mills.

BCFP's Victoria plywood mill, served independently, has enough log stock to run about six weeks.

The same applies to MacMillan Bloedel's Alberni plywood mill and its Alberni pulp mill.

DAY-TO-DAY BASIS

Rayonier has five logging camps other than the one at Jordan River, which will operate on day-to-day basis. The 700 men employed in them face lay-off unless logs can be delivered.

Malloch and Mosely, which has contracts to log for Pacific Logging Co. Ltd., said the 15-man camp operated at Nitinat Lake faces uncertain future, although it can stock logs for a time on the lake. It depends on tugs to carry booms through tidal narrows to the west coast.

B.C. Forest also has a camp at Port Renfrew, where 240 men are employed. They could be laid off within two weeks.

Victoria Plywood mill was expected to continue operating for about 30 days and Plumper Bay Sawmills Ltd. will be able to keep running about two weeks.

A towboat owners' spokesman said a policy of trying to man tugs with management personnel for "essential services" is being done on a limited basis because the owners are not resigning themselves to inaction.

But they have now begun to encounter "hot cargoes" which he indicated would hamper this policy.

The owners are not attempting to provide anything like normal operations, the BCTOA spokesman said.

Snuol as American bombers wiped out 90 per cent of it and a U.S. tank force rolled in unopposed. The bombers were called in after the tank column fought its way into the centre of the town Tuesday and then had to retreat.

The three fronts opened today were northeast and southwest of the Fish Hook:

1. Three thousand U.S. infantrymen of the 25th Division began moving by helicopter and armored personnel carriers westward along Route 20, 50 miles southwest of the Fish Hook.

2. South Vietnamese troops moved north out of Loc Ninh and were to link up with the U.S. 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment advancing northeast on Route 7 after capturing Snuol.

3. Helicopters landed troops of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Divison and South Vietnamese troops 23 miles north of Song Be and about 10 miles beyond the border. This is also northeast of the Fish Hook.

RESISTANCE LIGHT

First reports indicated light to moderate contact in new operations.

There was no information on the northernmost Cambodian front, west of South Vietnam's central highlands, where heavy ground fire and bad weather stalled an attempt to land two battalions by helicopter 50 miles west of Pleiku Tuesday. Only one battalion of 50 men got in Tuesday.

The sixth front is in the Parrot's Beak section of Cambodia, due west of Saigon, the southernmost front. No major action was reported.

In Phnom Penh, Reuters correspondent Ian MacKenzie reported that a Viet Cong force was locked in battle with two battalions of Cambodian troops on the west bank of the Mekong River, 25 miles southeast of the capital.

The battle was near the strategic Neak Leung ferry crossing. The east bank of the crossing was captured by guerrillas Sunday.

In Saigon, the South Vietnamese government closed all schools, advanced the nightly curfew two hours to 11 p.m. and set up police checkpoints around the city to cope with persistent unrest. The capital has had almost daily demonstrations for two months.

The Supreme Court gave President Nguyen Van Thieu a setback Tuesday night by ruling that the military court trial of National Assembly member Tran Ngoc Chau was unconstitutional. Chau was sentenced to 10 years in prison for having contacts with a North Vietnamese agent, his brother. Chau contended that Thieu framed him because of his opposition to Thieu's policies.

Protests Growing

(Times News Services)

Demonstrations on campuses across the United States continued today in protest of the extension of combat into Cambodia and the slaying of four Kent State University students Monday by National Guardsmen.

Student strikes have spread to more than 170 campuses and there are plans to extend them to more, with faculty and administrative backing in many cases.

Boycott Paris Talks

PARIS (AP)—The Communist side boycotted the Vietnam peace talks today to protest American air raids on North Vietnam last weekend and U.S. military operations in Cambodia. But the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong did not break up the conference.

The North Vietnamese announced that they were postponing today's 66th meeting of the peace talks until Thursday, May 14. The regular Thursday meeting this week had been scheduled for today because this Thursday is Ascension Day, a holiday in France.

Oil Firm Indicted for Spill

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In the first action of its kind in the United States, a federal grand jury has indicted a major oil company on charges arising from a huge offshore oil spill.

The Chevron Oil Co. was cited Tuesday on 900 counts of willfully violating government regulations aimed at preventing pollution from oil wells drilled at sea.

Conviction on all counts could result in fines totalling $1,800,000.

In Washington, Interior Secretary Walter Hickel said enforcement of federal oil well safety rules is going to be strict. "We will be fair but we will be tough."

The grand jury said Chevron knowingly and wilfully failed to install and maintain storm chokes or similar subsurface control devices on 90 oil wells off the Louisiana coast in the Gulf of Mexico.

"We are confident that when the case is tried, we will be completely vindicated," said K. H. Shaffer of New Orleans, president of Chevron.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

A Pacific cold front will spread cloud and rain over the northern B.C. coast this afternoon but a ridge of high pressure over the south coast and B.C. interior will slow the advance of the disturbance over the province.

The Weather and You

The time when most of us long to get out in the weather, no matter whether it's cold or warm, blustery or rainy, is after we've been inside all day working in warm rooms and feeling lousy with that stuffed-up feeling.

If you feel that way and you go outside for a walk and some deep breathing, it isn't long before you begin to feel better. Your head is cleared, so to speak.

When that has happened to you, probably you were stimulated by the force of the wind against your body as you walked.

Wind acts as a sort of mechanical stimulant. The stronger the wind blows, the greater the stimulus. But when your body is in motion against the wind it doesn't experience the same degree of stimulation all over. You are stimulated more than double in the area from the chest to the top of your head than you are at the level of your knees.

MIRACLE COATING REPLACES PAINT

Another boon to the space age has been accomplished for home and apartment owners — an exterior wall coating so tough and durable it is guaranteed to totally eliminated exterior painting for over 15 years. This remarkable product combines the long-lasting properties of fiber-glass, asbestos, mica and perlite to make a wall surface that resists all climatic extremes. 16 colors available.

Guided missile manufacturers for the United States government have found this material a superior product fo insulation of heat shields used in the space program. Over 2 million world-wide applications have been made on industrial, commercial and residential buildings since 1946.

Applied with a Gun

"Fiberglass" Textured Coating is applied with heavy duty spray equipment under high pressure. It fuses itself to the wall surface to a thickness of 20 times that of paint. It remains flexible and withstands cracking and surface expansion and contraction. Every application is registered and factory-guaranteed for 15 full years against chipping, peeling or flaking.

Free information on how easily you may have "Fiberglass" Textured Coating applied now at low bank terms, with no down payment, may be obtained by calling direct or collect to Textured Coating Division:
